Mr. Michael Forsyth: EC assistance for the long-term unemployed is provided by the European social fund under objective 3 (which also covers several other priority groups). Following the adoption in July 1993 of new structural fund regulations for the period 1994-1999, a plan on the proposed use of objective 3 funds in Great Britain over that period was submitted to the EC Commission at the beginning of November; the Commission has not yet given a formal response.

The plan recognises that as the needs of the long-term unemployed vary, a range of provision is required, including work experience vocational training, job search facilities, and advice on job-finding and interview techniques. The aim will be to raise the skill levels, motivation and confidence of long-term unemployed people to enable them to compete more effectively in the labour market and to find and retain jobs.

Working Conditions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals he has to improve working conditions and workers' rights.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The United Kingdom has a substantial body of employment and health and safety legislation. This is kept under regular review to ensure that it continues to strike the right balance between the essential interests of workers and the need to keep to a minimum the burdens on business. In general, terms and conditions of employment are for negotiation and agreement between employers and employees without Government intervention.

Car Imports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what share imported cars took of the United Kingdom car market in 1973; what they take currently; what forecasts were made in 1973 of the effect of EC membership on the British car industry; and by how much output and employment in the industry has changed since 1973.

Mr. Sainsbury: I am not aware of the forecasts to which the hon. Gentleman refers. A search of relevant literature would involve disproportionate cost.

The available data are as follows:

Year	Imports as a percentage of UK car market	Production (cars)	Employment in motor vehicles and parts industry
1973	27	1,747,321	514,000

Rover Group

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will seek assurances from BMW concerning its takeover of Rover.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the letter sent from BMW to my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade, a copy of the which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Timber and Pulp

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he has as to the impact of timber and pulp imports into the United Kingdom on temperate rain forest areas in Canada; what quantity of timber and pulp originates from such sources; and if he will consider removing the favourable trade tariff awarded to imports of this kind from Canada.

Mr. Needham: In 1992 (the latest complete year for which data is available) the United Kingdom imported timber and pulp from Canada valued at £224,715,000. Imports from Canada do not receive any favourable tariff treatment. In any case, it is not open to the United Kingdom to alter the tariff on these products—that is a matter for the European Community, which has a common customs tariff. As for the impact of logging on temperature rain forest areas in Canada, that is a matter for the Canadian authorities, as principle 2 of the Rio declaration makes clear.

Parcelforce

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy that any announcement about the future of Parcelforce will be made concurrently with announcements about the future of Royal Mail.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade makes announcements about policy. It is not his practice to make policies about announcements.

Dress Sizes

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to introduce a standard dress size in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Any new or revised British Standard is a matter primarily for the responsible Committee of the British Standards Institution. The Institution is independent of Government. I am advised that there are no plans to introduce a standard dress size in the United Kingdom. A British standard which provides for a system of designating the sizes of women's garments, BS3666 already exists. Except where special considerations such as safety apply, the Government's view is that the development, promotion and use of standards is best undertaken by industry itself, with the support of the British Standards Institution, in the light of consumer requirements in the market, on a voluntary basis.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the amount and reasons for unauthorised payments by the Export Credits Guarantee Department.

Mr. Needham: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Tiverton (Mrs. Browning) on 2 February at column 772.

The payments made to exporters were irregular because, although they were made on what was considered to be an appropriate basis for sharing recoveries, they were in excess of what we are now advised is the exporters' strict entitlement under the terms of the guarantee, and because no Treasury approval had been obtained for making what were therefore in effect ex-gratia payments.

Tin Mining

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what assessment was made, and when, with the costs of closure of the South Crofty tin mine in Cornwall on (a) employment, (b) related industries, (c) the environment and (d) the National Rivers Authority operation at Wheal Jane (i) by his Department and (ii) in conjunction with other Departments; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what cross-departmental cost-benefit analysis was undertaken of the possible impact before refusing Carnon Consolidated a further loan; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what assessment was made of the impact on Carnon Consolidateds tin mining operation of refusing its request for a further loan; and what conclusions were reached.

Mr. Sainsbury: On 21 December 1993 Carnon's directors made a formal application to the Department for permission to draw additional monies from the existing loans, which had been made under section 8 of the Industrial Development Act 1982; these loans were suspended in June 1990 on the grounds that the project was in jeopardy. When the application was made on 21 December 1993, the company's Directors were seeking an urgent decision in January 1994. Carnon submitted financial and other information in support of its request.

The decision to refuse further drawings from the loans was taken under the legal and financial criteria which apply to selective financial assistance under the 1982 Act, taking account of economic and employment considerations and the information available about the environmental implications. Assessment of the environmental issues is continuing.

Because of the need to maintain commercial confidentiality, I cannot disclose the results of the Department's investigations. Discussions continue with the company on their plans and proposals.

Enterprise Initiative

Mr. Bates: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much has been spent on the enterprise initiative since its inception in the north-east region of England.

Mr. Eggar: Total payments on enterprise initiative consultancy projects in the North East from the launch of the consultancy scheme in 1988 to the end of 1993 amounted to £11·1 million.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list all the visits that have been made by Trade and Industry Ministers to (a) Ecuador, (b) India, (c) Indonesia, (d) Jordan, (d) Malaysia, (f) Nigeria, (g) Oman, (h) Pakistan and (i) Thailand since June 1987; and what was the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Needham: Information on all overseas visits by Trade and Industry Ministers to these markets for any purpose since June 1987 could be made available only at disproportionate cost. The following Trade and Industry Ministers made trade promotion visits (to the markets referred to) in the financial year 1993-94.

Mr. Needham

Malaysia/Indonesia—November/December 1993

Mr. Sainsbury: During 1993 I made 17 visits abroad. The visits and their purposes are set out in the table together with an estimate of the costs which covers travel and subsistance for me and those who accompanied me.

Industry (Financial Assistance)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what have been the administration costs of each of his Department's schemes of financial assistance to industry in each of the last five years (a) as a total cost and (b) as a proportion of the total individual scheme budget.

Mr. Heseltine: The information in respect of the period I have been President of the Board of Trade is contained in form O of the Department's MINIS returns, which were placed in the Library of the House last July. Data is not available for the earlier years.

Steel Mills

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the Government's policy concerning overcapacity in the steel mills of the European Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: State subsidies are a major cause of EC over-capacity. The agreement reached at the December Industry Council will ensure both worthwhile capacity reductions and a much improved framework for the control of state aids.

British Coal

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if, when he next meets the chairman of British Coal, he will ask him to reply to the letters sent to him by the hon. Member for Normanton.

Mr. Eggar: I understand that the chairman of British Coal replied to the hon. Member's letters on 11 February 1994.

North Sea Gas

Mr. Spearing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are his estimates of the date when progressive exhaustion of United Kingdom supplies of North sea gas, over the rate of proven discovery, has been or will be reached and, on the current rate of consumption, the quantities of energy at such dates that will be required from other sources to fill the consequential deficits.

Mr. Eggar: The table shows that the rate of proven discovery of gas on the United Kingdom continental shelf (as measured by the increase in proven reserves between the end of 1991 and the end of 1992) exceeded gas production in 1992 by 70 billion cubic metres. This indicates progressive enhancement rather than exhaustion.

Gas on the United Kingdom Continental Shelf[1]

Billion cubic metres

	1991	1992	Increase
Proven[2] reserves at end of period	1,345	1,465	+120
Cumulative production	805	855	+50
Remaining proven gas reserves	540	610	+70

[1] Includes onshore and offshore discoveries.
[2] Proven reserves are defined as those which on the available evidence are virtually certain to be technically and economically producible (i.e. those reserves which have a better than 90 per cent. chance of being produced).

Oil Pollution

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to ensure that operators granted exemption under section 23 from section 3 of the Prevention of Oil Pollution Act 1971 comply with the PARCOM decision approved at a meeting at the Oslo and Paris Commissions on 22 September 1992.

Mr. Eggar: Exemptions issued under section 23 of the Prevention of Oil Pollution Act 1971 (POPA '71), have conditions attached to them which require operators to report the level and quantity of oil discharged with drill cuttings. The conditions specify the target level which is in accordance with the PARCOM Decision 92/2, approved at the meeting at the Oslo and Paris Commissions on 22 September 1992.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many operators are bound by section 3 of the Prevention of Oil Pollution Act 1971; how many have applied for exemption under section 23; and how many have made no application for exemption.

Mr. Eggar: All 38 operators on the UKCS are bound by section 3 of the Prevention of Oil Pollution Act 1971.

During 1993, 21 operators applied and were granted Exemptions under section 3 of the Prevention of Oil Pollution Act 1971.

During 1993, 17 operators made no request for Exemption under section 3 of the Prevention of Oil Pollution Act 1971.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many applications have been made by companies for exemption under section 23, from section 3 of the Prevention of Oil Pollution Act 1971; how many applications have been granted; and how many have been refused.

Mr. Eggar: A total of 178 applications were made during 1993. All were granted.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each exemption granted under section 23 from section 3 of the Prevention of Oil Pollution Act 1971, the operator, the year, the volume of discharged cuttings and the measured oil content of discharged cuttings.

Mr. Eggar: A list showing operators and the total volume of discharged cuttings and oil content for the year 1993 is as follows:

Oil Licensing

Mr. Ainger: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what criteria he used in deciding to exclude from the 14th licensing round 35 blocks identified as highly sensitive but nominated for inclusion by the oil industry; and if he will list the blocks.

Mr. Eggar: Decisions on whether to offer environmentally sensitive blocks for licence in the 14th Round were taken on the basis of the following criteria:

whether the environmental sensitivities identified could be protected by imposing strict conditions on any licences awarded;

whether there were objections to the licensing of the block from other Government Departments and the combination of restrictions would have made exploration impractical; and the degree of company interest in the blocks.

Since other Departments' objections were provided in confidence, I am unable to list the blocks.

Pension Plans

Mr. Darling: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what information he has as to the number of pension providers that have made provision for claims against them in respect of possible mis-selling of personal pension plans; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what advice he has given to pension providers to show in their accounts appropriate provision against possible claims in respect of alleged mis-selling of personal pension plans; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what information he has as to the total amount provided by the life assurance industry against claims in respect of alleged mis-selling of personal pension plans.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The Department has written to life offices to ask them to indicate their likely exposure to compensation in respect of mis-selling of personal pensions, and to provide guidance on how the Department expects life offices to reserve for any such exposure in future Companies Act accounts and DTI returns. The Securities and Investments Board are seeking to determine the extent of the mis-selling. The position will not be clear until that review is completed. However, where life offices consider that they are likely to have a liability or a contingent liability, the Department expects this to be recognised in the published accounts.

Textile Tariffs

Mr. Riddick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his discussions with Sir Leon Brittan and others concerning the level of tariffs being levied on textiles by India, Pakistan, Indonesia and Korea.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 14 February 1994]: In contacts with the commission on the Uruguay round market access negotiations, United Kingdom ministers and officials have underlined our concern that the Commission should take every opportunity to press the Governments of India, Pakistan and Indonesia to improve their offers in respect of textiles and clothing. The European Commission has made clear its determination to continue negotiations to improve market access offers, if necessary until ministers sign the GATT Final Act in April. As far as Korean tariff increases on wool fabrics are concerned, I have written to the Korean Finance and Trade Industry ministers to express my concern.

EDUCATION

Surplus Places

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is his latest assessment of the number of surplus places in each of (a) the London boroughs and (b) the Greater Manchester boroughs.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has not collected comprehensive information on surplus school places since the survey in 1991 from which were derived the figures given in reply to a similar question from the hon. Member on Wednesday 28 April 1993.

We intend to make regulations later this year under section 21 of the Education Act 1993 requiring all LEAs and, where it has relevant responsibilities, the new Funding Agency for Schools, to submit information to the Secretary of State annually, beginning in 1994, on surplus places in LEA maintained and grant-maintained schools respectively.

Grant-maintained Schools

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment he has made of the number of grant-maintained schools at (a) primary and (b) secondary level, set out by parliamentary constituency.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department does not at present hold a full list of locations of grant-maintained schools by parliamentary constituency. One is to be compiled shortly and I will send a copy to my hon. Friend as soon as it is available.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will publish the cost of special purpose grants—transitional—to grant-maintained schools in England in each year since 1991.

Mr. Robin Squire: Total spending on transitional grants to self-governing—grant maintained—schools in each year since 1991-92 has been as follows:

Year	£ million
[1]1991-92	5·3
[1]1992-93	10·4
[2]1993-94	23·0

[1] Outturn.
[2] Estimated outturn

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are the current arrangements for funding grant-maintained schools in Essex; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: Grant-maintained schools in Essex are receiving funding in 1993-94 based on their entitlement under the local education authority's local management of schools scheme, plus additional sums to reflect their additional responsibilities. My right hon. Friend announced on 14 February his intention to introduce a common funding formula for funding GM schools in Essex and four other LEAs in 1994-95.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the proportion of the total number of pupils in Essex at (a) primary school and (b) secondary school who are attending grant-maintained schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: Essex has the highest percentage of primary school pupils being educated in grant-maintained schools at 12 per cent of the total, and the third highest proportion of secondary school pupils with 64 per cent.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many (a) secondary and (b) primary schools in Essex have become grant maintained; and how many applications to become grant maintained are outstanding.

Mr. Robin Squire: There are 63 secondary and 55 primary schools operating with grant-maintained status in Essex. A further four secondary and 15 primary schools are currently approved to become grant-maintained on 1 April. Three secondary and two primary schools have published proposals following a yes vote and are awaiting a decision.

Autism

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) if he will make a statement about the provision made by each local education authority for children with autism; and what steps he is taking to ensure that children with such difficulties are identified and helped appropriately;

(2) what information he has on the extent of under-identification of children with autism;

(3) how many children have been diagnosed as having autism problems in each local education authority area; how many have had statements in each of the past five years; and what estimate he has made of the number of children with autism problems who have not been identified and provided for appropriately;

(4) how many children have been diagnosed as having autism problems required special educational support in each local education authority area in each of the last five years.

Mr. Forth: The information requested is not collected centrally. Under the Education Acts 1981 and 1993 it is the responsibility of schools and LEAs to identify, assess and make provision for children with special educational needs, including those with autism. The Secretary of State intends, subject to the approval of Parliament, to issue a code of practice which will give practical guidance to schools and local education authorities on the identification and assessment of all children with special educational needs.

The Department for Education and the Department of Health are currently sponsoring a research project by the University of Nottingham into the education and treatment of children with autism in England and Wales. The researchers, assuming a prevalence rate of six per 10,000, estimate that there are in the region of 7,800 children with autism in England and Wales. Of these, approximately 1,000 children attend schools or units which specialise in teaching children with autism. We await the report of the second stage of the research project which aims to evaluate the main types of provision for young autistic children.

Bullying

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what consideration he has given to (a) bullying in school, (b) inadequate playground supervision of children and (c) the provision of appropriate training for all staff in schools on how to handle bullying; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Head teachers are responsible for maintaining discipline and good behaviour in schools. The Government expect them to deal firmly with bullying and to make appropriate arrangements for supervision of children and for staff training. To help them, the Department issued practical advice in the form of "Action Against Bullying" packs to all schools in England in July 1992. We are considering whether further advice would be helpful. Local education authorities have also had the opportunity to bid for support for whole-school action on bullying under the "Truancy and Disaffected Pupils" category of the Department's grants for education support and training, GEST, schemes for 1993-94 and 1994-95.

Further Education Colleges, Coventry

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much expenditure has been incurred by each of Coventry's further education colleges in legal costs since incorporation; and what are the comparable figures for the 1 April 1993.

Mr. Boswell: Neither the Department nor the Further Education Funding Council collects information on college expenditure at the level of detail necessary to enable the amounts spent on legal advice to be identified. In the year to 1 April 1993 legal costs incurred by Coventry's further education colleges were met by the city council, which is unable to disaggregate the information from overall costs.

Sixth Forms

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 8 February, Official Report, columns 168-69, if he will provide information showing the proportion of sixth form students in schools and colleges by local education authority area, in sixth forms with (a) fewer than 50 students, (b) 50 to 100 students and (c) 100 to 150 students.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is shown in the table.

Prospect School, Berkshire

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what undertakings have been given to Prospect school, Berkshire, in relation to funding under the technology college initiative.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Prospect school submitted an application for technology college status to the Department on 19 January. No undertakings have been given by the Department to the school in relation to the outcome of this application, nor to funding under the technology college initiative.

Holdback Grant

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will outline the conditions for the release of holdback grant to further education colleges.

Mr. Boswell: Colleges within the further education sector will be required to give the FEFC an assurance that their governing body is satisfied that all contracts of employment entered into with newly employed staff on or after 1 April 1994 provide adequate flexibility for the college to make proper use of its resources, both human and material, throughout the week and year in accordance with the institution's and its customers' needs. In the case of colleges which, immediately prior to entering the further education sector, were maintained or assisted by a local education authority, this assurance will need to include confirmation that all contracts of employment entered into with newly appointed teachers or lecturers on or after 1 April 1994 are significantly different from those used by the maintaining or assisting LEA immediately before the college entered the further education sector. In both cases, the FEFC will ask colleges to sign a declaration that they have met the condition.

Colleges Employers Forum

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what legal advice he has received on the contents of the letter from the Minister for Further and Higher Education to the Colleges Employers Forum of 8 February; and what plans he has to revise the letter in the light of legal advice and recent pay settlements.

Correspondence

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the hon. Member for Sherwood may expect a reply to his letters dated 16 December 1993 and 16 January 1994.

Mr. Jack: My right hon. Friend replied to the hon. Member's letters on 14 February 1994.

Animal Welfare

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who is responsible for ensuring the welfare provisions of animals being transported across the EC for slaughter are adhered to.

Mr. Soames: Directive 91/628/EEC on the protection of animals during transport requires each member state to bring into force the laws, regulations and administrative provisions necessary to comply with the directive.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of agriculture, Fisheries and Food what instructions are given to her veterinary department for checking that (i) journey times for farm animals to be exported from the United Kingdom are properly completed, (ii) that such animals are fit to travel and (iii) animals being exported for slaughter in Spain are being sent to abbattoris which comply with the EU directive requiring animals to be stunned before slaughter; how many times since 1 January 1993 her veterinary department has failed to follow these instructions; and what steps she has taken to ensure that future failures will be avoided.

Mr. Soames: All farm animals sent to another member state are inspected for fitness to travel by a veterinary surgeon appointed by the Government. For journeys likely to take more than 15 hours the exporter is required to submit to the Department in writing the arrangements which have been made to rest, feed and water the animals.

The Government lifted the restrictions on exports to Spain in January 1993 after an agreement had been reached with the Spanish authorities to send animals only to those abattoirs which they have confirmed to be applying Community welfare rules. In December the Government agreed further safeguards with the Spanish authorities. Details of all consignments are sent to Spain so the authorities may check that animals arrive at the destinations declared by British exporters. No consignments of animals have been sent to Spain for slaughter this year.

On two occasions last year consignments were exported where the agreed procedures, to ensure that the slaughterhouses of destination were on the approved list, were not followed. This was due to a regrettable error. The procedures for authorising all export journeys have been reviewed and fresh instructions have been issued to the state veterinary service.

Pig Meat

Mr. Mills: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what action she is taking in her communications with the European Commission to prevent the subsidies given by certain EC member countries on the production of pig meat; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what representations she has received about the difficulties being experienced by United Kingdom pig producers due to the dumping of exported pig meat by France, Netherlands, Germany and Denmark.

Mr. Jack: We have received representations from hon. Members on behalf of constituents and from individual pig producers and their representative bodies. I will shortly be meeting the British Pig Association. They are all concerned about the state of the European Community pigmeat market and allegations of illegal national aids in some member states.

The current low prices are caused by high levels of supply on the pigmeat market resulting from industry expansion in most member states, including the United Kingdom. Prices are low throughout the single market.

Although there are rumours of illegal aids to pig producers in other member states, we only have firm evidence in respect of a scheme in France. My right hon. Friend has written to the European Commission twice urging that an early decision be made on the legal status of this aid in accordance with article 93 of the treaty and that the appropriate action then be taken. She has also twice raised the matter in the Council of Ministers and the United Kingdom delegation has raised it at every pigmeat management committee from September.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research her Department has commissioned into the correlation between the incidence of BSE and the use of organophosphorous pesticides.

Mr. Soames: When BSE was first indentified in 1986 a detailed epidemiological investigation was carried out to identify possible sources of the disease. This included an examination of any possible correlation betweeen BSE and exposure of cattle to organophophorus compounds but it was concluded, on the basis of those studies, that there was no such correlation and that the only positive correlation to be found was in relation to animal feed which contained ruminant protein. This resulted in the ban on the feeding of ruminant protein to ruminants in July 1988 which has now resulted in a marked decline in the incidence of the disease in younger animals and an overall 15 per cent. decline in the number of cases reported compared with the same period last year.

In January scientists from the Department, the Department of Health and the Agriculture and Food Research Council met Mr. Purdey to consider his views on the role of organophosphorus in the origins of the BSE epidemic and had a full discussion with him on the evidence that he put forward. Although it was agreed to consider some of the points covered in more detail, no formal research has been commissioned as a result of that very recent meeting.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many suspected cases of BSE were placed under restriction by a Ministry veterinarian in respect of which the restrictions were subsequently cancelled by another Ministry veterinarian, for each month, from February 1992 to November 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The numbers of suspect cases of BSE in Great Britain which were placed under restrictions by Ministry veterinary officers, and from which restrictions were subsequently removed, from February 1992 to November 1993 are as follows:

Month of report	Number
February 1992	127
March 1992	146
April 1992	145
May 1992	153
June 1992	159
July 1992	125
August 1992	143
September 1992	173
October 1992	142
November 1992	119
December 1992	146
January 1993	118
February 1993	142
March 1993	202
April 1993	197
May 1993	181
June 1993	144
July 1993	128
August 1993	148
September 1993	153
October 1993	136
November 1993	133

The information as to whether restrictions were lifted by a different Ministry veterinary officer to the one by whom they were served could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The annual fluctuations in the rate at which restrictions are lifted reflect farm management practices which precipitate the onset of diseases with some clinical signs that are similar to those of BSE, but where treatment results in recovery.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle have died or been destroyed as a result of BSE since 1990.

Mr. Soames: From 1991 to 1993 inclusive, 111,878 cattle have been slaughtered in Great Britain because BSE was suspected. In the same period 963 cattle in which BSE was suspected died while under restrictions or between report to the Ministry and examination by a veterinary officer.

Farm Animals (Export)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farm animals were exported from the United Kingdom in 1993 (a) for slaughter and (b) for further fattening.

Mr. Soames: Because of delays following the introduction of the Intrastat system details of the total numbers of live animals exported in 1993 are not yet available. It is not possible to say when they will become available, but when they do I shall write to the hon. Member.

Fishermen

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures she is taking to ensure uniformity of treatment between British and French fishermen in the current market.

Mr. Jack: I set out in a previous reply on 14 February at col. 586 the steps that I and my hon. Friend have taken to help our fishermen and exporters maintain their access to the French market in the face of the disgraceful intimidation to which they have been subjected. I look to the European Commission to scrutinise the compatibility of the French government's new aid package with the rules on state aids.

Whales

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many different species of whales currently exist; and what assessment she has made of the adequacy of the measures available to protect them.

Mr. Jack: There are at least 78 species of cetaceans currently in existence, of which 12 are commonly referred to as "great" whales. Under European Community legislation there is a de facto ban on commercial whaling within the Community. Globally, responsibility for the conservation of whales rests with the International Whaling Commission where the United Kingdom works actively to secure effective measures for the conservation and protection of all whale species and strongly supports the current moratorium on commercial whaling.

Banana Producers

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make it her policy to negotiate a transferable banana quota for the Windward Islands.

Mr. Jack: We have already pressed the Commission on the need for a transferable banana quota for the Windward Islands. This is not, however, provided for in the Council regulation establishing the EC bananas regime. If changes in that regulation become necessary we shall continue to seek quota transferability between the Windward Islands.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will press for the implementation of the guarantees enshrined in protocol IV, of Lomé IV for the banana producers of the Caribbean.

Mr. Jack: The EC bananas regime negotiated under the United Kingdom presidency already ensures access for imports of bananas from the Caribbean and from other African, Caribbean and Pacific (ACP) producers into the Community in accordance with the provisions of the Lomé convention.

Organic Farming

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she last met representatives of the organic farming lobby to discuss the implementation of the organic aid scheme in England.

Mr. Jack: My right hon. Friend last met representatives of the organic farming movement on 15 November 1993. It was agreed that there should be further discussions with officials and another ministerial meeting in the spring concentrating on the role of organic farming in relation to reform of the European Community's common agricultural policy.

Sea Mammal Research Unit (Guidelines)

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when her Department received from the Department of the Environment draft guidelines prepared by the sea mammal research unit on precautions to minimise acoustic disturbance to small cetaceans; which bodies or organisations it has consulted or asked to comment on the guidelines; and what plans she has to consult non-governmental bodies on the guidelines.

Mr. Jack: A preliminary draft of the guidelines was made available to MAFF officials on 13 December 1993. A working party established by the Department of the Environment is currently preparing a further draft which will be discussed by other Government Departments with an interest in seismic testing and the agreement on the conservation of small cetaceans of the Baltic and North sea. At that stage, as the Minister for the Environment and Countryside explained to the hon. Member on 28 January at column 341, a decision will be taken on whether to consult more widely.

State Veterinary Service

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will place in the Library a copy of the Lebrecht report on the State Veterinary Service.

Mr. Soames: The Lebrecht review of the department's animal health and veterinary group, which includes the state veterinary service, is concerned with its management, and it is not appropriate to publish its recommendations. However, staff and other interested parties will be consulted about any consequential changes my right hon. Friend is minded to make.

Poland (Spirits Quotas)

Mr. Sims: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans she has to raise with the Polish Government their application of high tariff levels and restrictive quotas on imported spirits.

Mr. Needham: I have been asked to reply.

My Department has a close working relationship with the drinks industry both through its trade associations and through many individual producers. The question of high tariff levels on certain spirits imported into Poland has been a concern of the industry—particularly Scotch whisky producers—for some time and it is an issue which we have raised with the Polish government on a number of occasions in the past. The issue of restrictive quotas is a relatively new one and my Department has asked the European Commission to take this up in the context of the EC/Poland association agreement. My Department will continue to give its full support to the industry in its representations to the Polish administration.

Income Support and Family Credit

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentages of children in Northern Ireland aged (a) under five years, (b) five to 11 years and (c) 12 to 15 years live in families receiving (i) income support and (ii) family credit; and what were the figures in each year since 1978-79.

Mr. Ancram: The available information is provided in the tables below. For supplementary benefit/income support, the information requested is not collated in the age group 5-11 but in the age group 5-10. Separate figures are not available for the years 1980 to 1983. No age breakdown is available for children in families receiving family income supplement/family credit.

NHS Private Facilities

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients have been treated in national health service hospitals private facilities in each year since 1987-88.

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Ordinary admissions	Day cases
1988-89	1,796	1,709
1989-90	1,636	1,456
1990-91	1,983	1,437
1991-92	1,971	1,100
1992-93	1,938	1,291

Comparable information is not available for 1987.

Wind Turbines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many planning applications for wind turbine construction have been (a) accepted and (b) rejected since 1984; and how many wind turbines currently operate in the Province.

Mr. Tim Smith: Since 1984 three planning applications have been made for turbines and all have been approved. There are a total of four wind turbines currently in operation in Northern Ireland.

Child Support

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Child Support Agency applications have failed to be enforced because of the absent parent (a) leaving and (b) being outside the legal jurisdiction of the agency.

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Child Support Agency under its Chief Executive, Patrick Devlin. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. P. Devlin to Mr. Clifford Forsythe, dated 16 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to reply to your question about the number of Child Support Agency applications that have failed to be enforced because of the absent parent being outside the jurisdiction of the Agency.

Information on the number of absent parents leaving the jurisdiction is not collected routinely and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. Of the applications processed to date, 159 could not be pursued because the absent parent was outside the jurisdiction of the Agency.

I hope you find this information useful.

Catalytic Converters

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 20 January, Official Report, c. 782, what proportion of the vehicles licensed in Northern Ireland at December 1992 in each category had catalytic converters fitted.

Mr. Tim Smith: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Northern Ireland agency under its Chief Executive, Brendan Magee. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. B. Magee to Mr. Clifford Forsythe, dated 15 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to reply to your question regarding the proportion of vehicles licensed in Northern Ireland at December 1992 which had catalytic converters fitted.

We do not hold such data on our records and therefore I am unable to provide the information requested.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table showing, in 1992-93 prices, the gross public spending for each year from 1990-91 and the projected expenditure for each of the Northern Ireland national health service bodies as listed in "Public Bodies 1993".

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 15 February 1994]: The information requested is as follows.

Notes:

1. The four health and social services councils were established with effect from 1 April 1991.
2. The Health Promotion Agency was established on 1 October 1990. 1990-91 figures are for the six month period ended 31 March 1991.
3. All figures shown are at 1992-93 prices. Figures for 1993-94 are estimated and deflated to 1992-93 prices.
4. The figures for total spending by health and social services boards for the year 1992-93 are not directly comparable with those for earlier years as:
   (a) for the first time they include amounts in respect of capital charges; and
   (b) they reflect the purchaser/provider split and show the Boards primarily as purchasers of services; and
   (c) they reflect the movement towards capitation funding and take account of patient flows across boundaries.
5. Six health and social services trusts were established on 1 April 1993. It should be noted that they obtain the greatest proportion of their income from boards and hence their expenditure will largely already be reflected in boards' expenditure figures.

HEALTH

Indicative Prescribing

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost of administering the indicative prescribing system in general practice in each of the last three years.

Dr. Mawhinney: Improving prescribing, including managing the indicative prescribing scheme, is a key function of national health service management and the administration costs are not identified separately.

Psychiatric Care

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of psychiatric beds in each year since 1979.

Mr. Bowis: The available information is shown in the table compiled for the Mental Health Task Force "Survey of English Mental Illness Hospitals March 1993", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Health Service Expenditure

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the level of net NHS current expenditure on (i) regional hospital boards and regional health authorities, (ii) the NHS Management Executive and (iii) NHSME regional outposts in each year since 1973-74 expressed in 1993-94 prices adjusted by (a) the gross domestic product deflator and (b) changes in input unit costs.

Mr. Sackville: The table shows total revenue expenditure at 1993-94 prices of regional health authorities, the National Health Service Management Executive and the NHSME outposts. Expenditure is not readily available prior to 1987-88. The index showing changes in input unit costs is not available for 1993-94 prices.

Figures for regional health authorities (RHAs) for 1991-92 and 1992-93 are not comparable with those for earlier years. In particular, many RHAs were, in 1991-92 and 1992-93, involved in the purchase of healthcare and related services for their region.

Notes

Figures for regional health authorities (RHAs) for 1992-93 are provisional.

The figures cover the total revenue expenditure of the authorities including that incurred on headquarters administration and on the management and provision of services in the years concerned.

Figures are not available for the NHSME prior to 1990-91.

Figures for the NHSME are not directly comparable from year to year because of organisational changes between the NHSME and the rest of the Department.

The figures shown for the NHSME are gross because although the Department of Health receives income in the form of Receipts, this income is not split between the separate divisions within the Department and it is therefore not possible to provide net figures for the NHSME.

No information was collected for NHSME outposts prior to 1992-93.

Smoking

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the information available to her on the years that other countries introduced bans on tobacco advertising with the change in their and our levels of smoking since then in each case with the present levels of tax and retail price.

Mr. Sackville: The table shows the estimated changes in prevalence of cigarette smoking in countries which have introduced bans on tobacco advertising, together with the changes over similar periods in the United Kingdom:

Country	Final year of data before ban	Smoking prevalence in that year	Prevalence in most recent year for which data is available	Percentage points by which smoking prevalence has fallen since ban	Percentage points by which smoking prevalence has fallen in the United Kingdom over similar period
		Per cent.	Per cent.	Per cent.	Per cent.
Norway	1975	43	35 (1992)	8	12
Finland	1977	29	26 (1985)	3	8
Canada	1989	32	30 (1990)	2	2 (1988-90)
New Zealand	1990	28	27 (1992)	1	2

Bans on tobacco advertising came into effect in Australia in 1992 and France in 1993. It is too early to estimate the changes in smoking prevalence since these bans were introduced.

The most recent available comparison of retail prices and levels of taxation for cigarettes in these countries is:

Country	Average retail price of 20 cigarettes (October 1992)	Total taxes
Norway	3·46	2·37
Finland	2·33	1·72
Canada	2·68	1·84
New Zealand	1·78	1·20
Australia	1·53	0·92
France	1·32	0·94
United Kingdom	2·23	1·69

Parkinson's Disease

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement setting out details of the principal advances that have been made during the past 10 years in the treatment of Parkinson's disease.

Mr. Bowis: Parkinson's disease is associated with a deficiency of a substance called dopamine which is essential for the transmission of nerve impulses. In recent years there have been developments in new variants of "dopamine agonist" drugs which assist in the maintenance of the body's level of dopamine. The use of self-administered injections of apomorphine, the usual drug prescribed for the condition, is becoming widespread. The use of brain tissue transplants remains experimental and is not currently being carried out in the United Kingdom.

Safe Sex

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the role of the Health Education Authority in providing national public education campaigns to promote condom use following recent research into sexual attitudes and lifestyles.

Mr. Sackville: Since 1987, the Health Education Authority has had a continuing role in providing public education on HIV/AIDS and sexual health by delivering information about responsible sexual behaviour. The national survey of sexual attitudes and lifestyles showed the impact of public education, providing evidence of considerable awareness of HIV/AIDS among those reporting behaviour which carried a higher risk of infection, and of increased condom use both by those with more partners and by people under 24. It is important that the HEA and other agencies continue their national and local efforts to promote sexual health.

Local Authorities (Charging Guidance)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent guidance she has issued to local authorities regarding charging for home helps, day care and community alarms; what are the financial implications of this guidance; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: Guidance about charging for non-residential social services for adults was sent to local social services authorities in January, and copies of the circular (LAC(94)1) are available in the Library. Powers to charge are discretionary and so it is not possible to quantify precisely the financial implications of this guidance.

Car Parking Charges

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her policy towards the charging of nurses to park their cars on NHS premises.

Mr. Sackville: Charges for car parking on national health service premises are a matter for local determination in the light of local circumstances, including the needs of patients, visitors and staff and the availability and cost of providing such facilities.

Emergency Fees (Collection by NHS Trusts)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether NHS trusts are required to collect emergency fees under the Road Traffic Acts.

Mr. Sackville: Health service hospitals, including those managed by national health service trusts, are empowered to collect the emergency treatment fee under section 158 of the Road Traffic Act 1988 and it is Government policy that it should be collected. The fee, which must be covered by motor vehicle insurance policies, is payable by vehicle users in respect of each person given immediate treatment or examination arising from a road traffic accident.

Bed Allocations

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what evidence she has that health authorities use age as a criterion for allocating acute patients to different hospitals within their area;

(2) what is her Department's policy on the use by health authorities of age as a criterion by which patients are allocated beds in specific hospitals.

Mr. Sackville: Health authorities are responsible for purchasing appropriate services for all age groups in their resident populations. Children and young people in hospital should be provided with accommodation, facilities and staffing appropriate to their age and development. Depending on local circumstances, hospitals may elect to admit people over the age of 75 to specifically designated wards to ensure they receive the most appropriate care.

Reports (Costs)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to advise all health authorities and trusts to review the costs of producing, publishing, printing and distributing reports in order to maximise the proportion of funds spent on direct health care.

Dr. Mawhinney: Communications about the services being purchased on behalf of patients and the way they are provided are an essential part of serving the public. National Health Service trusts are required to publish, as a minimum, an annual report, annual accounts, a summary business plan and a strategic direction document; health authorities are required to provide a range of information as part of their public accountability. We expect them to make the best, most cost-effective use of their resources.

Paediatric Intensive Care

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will detail by region the (a) recommended and (b) actual number levels of paediatric intensive care beds; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: There are no nationally agreed levels for paediatric intensive care bed provision. The British Paediatric Association has recently published a report "The Care of Critically Ill Children" which recommends that there should be one bed per 48,000 children. The report, which is available in the Library, shows the regional distribution of paediatric intensive care beds. The National Health Service Management Executive, in its executive letter of 27 January 1994 has asked district health authorities to review the current level of paediatric intensive care beds in order to develop in collaboration with other district health authorities and hospitals, a strategic plan for the purchasing of paediatric intensive care which takes into account local needs and resources. Copies of the letter are available in the Library.

Alternative and Complementary Medicine

Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what analysis has been made of potential cost savings to public funds if alternative and complementary medical treatments, with particular reference to osteopathy, chiropractic and homoeopathy, were more widely available on the national health service; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has commissioned a study by the medical care research unit of Sheffield university which will examine the impact complementary therapists—such as osteopaths, chiropractors, and homoeopaths—have on the prescribing patterns, cost of drugs, hospital referral practices, patient satisfaction and repeat attendances, within general practice. The study started last December and will take two years to complete.

Ambulance Service, London

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the response times by the London ambulance service to 999 calls for each of the last five years; and what were the target times in each of those years.

Mr. Sackville: The target response time for emergency calls in each year was 95 per cent. responded to within 14 minutes. The percentage of calls responded to in the target time is shown in the table.

Year	Percentage of ambulances responding within 14 minutes
1988-89	82·8
1989-90	78·8
1990-91	73·7

The London ambulance service's performance against the patients charter standard of a 95 per cent. response within 14 minutes has been unacceptable. In December 1993 the Government announced £14·8 million additional investment for the London ambulance service in 1994-95. The additional funding will be used to replace 40 per cent. of the vehicle fleet; recruit and train 240 additional ambulance personnel; accelerate the paramedic training programme and improve their communications systems.

In response to this investment, the London ambulance service has agreed with its managing agency, South West Thames regional health authority, interim targets of achieving an 80 per cent. response rate within 14 minutes by September 1994 and 85 per cent. by April 1995. When these targets have been met, the Government will expect the London ambulance service to establish an early date for the full achievement of the patients charter standard.

South Yorkshire Ambulance Trust

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made as to whether the south Yorkshire ambulance trust meets patients charter standards; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is for local purchasers to ensure that contracts and actual performance meet patient's charter standards.

Accident and Emergency Services, London

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made with regard to the review of accident and emergency services in London; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: There has been no special review of London's accident and emergency services. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) on 21 October 1993 at column 316.

Mentally Disturbed Children

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mentally disturbed children were in adult wards in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Bowis: It is a matter for health authorities to determine what arrangements are made locally about admission of children to hospital. However, our advice to purchasers contained in the guidance the "Health of the Nation Key Area Handbook: Mental Illness", a copy of which is in the Library, refers to a range of services which they need to consider so as to meet the needs of children and adolescents and this includes designated in-patient and day patient facilities.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the risks to humans of bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

Mr. Sackville: The Government receive advice on all matters relating to spongiform encephalopathies in humans and animals from an independent, expert committee, the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee (SEAC), chaired by Dr. David Tyrrell FRS.

The Government, on advice from SEAC, are satisfied that all the necessary safeguards are in place to minimise further spread of spongiform encephalopathies in animals and to prevent any risk of transmission to humans.

Scientific evidence has not revealed any link between bovine spongiform encephalopathy in cattle and incidence of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease, a human spongiform encephalopathy.

Public Relations

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which agencies are employed by each (a) regional health authority, (b) district health authority and (c) trust to deal with public relations; and what are the estimated costs involved.

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the individual health authorities or trusts. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairmen for details.

Agency Nurses, Wandsworth

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of agency nurses who were employed by the Wandsworth health authority for the period 1 to 31 January.

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for Wandsworth health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact Dr. Enid Vincent, the chairman, for details.

Sir James Ackers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans she has to ask Sir James Ackers to repay the sum paid to him on his resignation as chairman of the West Midlands regional health authority;

(2) if Sir James Ackers has repaid or offered to repay the sum paid to him on his resignation as chairman of the West Midlands regional health authority.

Dr. Mawhinney: Sir James Ackers has not repaid or offered to repay the sum paid to him on his resignation and we have no plans to ask him to do so.

Mr. John Hoare

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will set out the detailed make-up of the £111,940 severance pay made to Mr. John Hoare, former Wessex regional health authority general manager.

Dr. Mawhinney: Mr. Hoare received a compensationary payment of £119,940 calculated on the basis of his final salary of £53,970 multiplied by the period remaining on his contract (26·67 months). He was allowed to purchase his lease car at a cost of £8,000, leaving a payment of £111,940.

NHS (Meetings)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will require all NHS authorities to publish the agendas of all meetings whether or not open to the public.

Dr. Mawhinney: No. All national health service authorities are required by the Public Bodies (Admission to Meetings) Act 1960 to supply the press, on request, with a copy of the agenda for all full meetings at which approval for specific action is required.

Hospital Trusts

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to ensure that persons appointed to be chairmen of hospital trusts record their financial and professional interests in a register of interest a copy of which should be placed in the Library.

Dr. Mawhinney: We are currently consulting on draft codes of conduct and accountability for national health service boards. In these we propose that where there is a potential for private interests to be material and relevant to NHS business, the relevant interests should be declared and recorded in the board minutes. We also propose that directorships and other significant interests held by NHS board members should be declared on appointment, kept up to date and set out in the annual report. The codes are to be implemented in all NHS trusts and authorities, subject to consultation, from 1 April 1994.

Health Authorities

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who will be chairman on 1 April of (a) Trent regional health authority and (b) Sheffield community health trust.

Dr. Mawhinney: Sir Michael Carlisle and Mrs. Kathryn Riddle respectively.

Steroids

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to introduce tests for diabetes before steroids are used on patients.

Mr. Sackville: We have no plans to issue prescriptive guidance on such tests which are a matter for the clinical judgement of individual doctors.

Steroids, which are powerful drugs, may cause side effects especially in high doses. Doctors are fully aware of this possibility and to minimise the risk the dose is reduced as quickly as possible to the lowest maintenance level. During this period the patient is monitored for side effects.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients died in (a) 1992-93 and (b) 1991-92 from the use of steroids in (i) England, (ii) the west midlands and (iii) Coventry.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table.

Coventry and Warwickshire Hospital

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she will announce her decision regarding the future of Coventry and Warwickshire hospital.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a local matter for Coventry health authority. Coventry health authority has recently completed a consultation on the transfer of services from the Coventry and Warwickshire Hospital to the Walsgrave Hospital. As the local community health council agreed the health authority's proposals, the authority is free to begin implementing its plans. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the authority, Mr. A Guy, for details.

West Midlands Health Authority

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to satisfy herself (a) regarding the proper financial management of the West Midlands health authority and (b) that proper accountability procedures are in place.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have proposed, and are consulting on, the introduction of a code of conduct for the NHS which will make explicit the standards of conduct expected of those in the most senior positions in the NHS and provide a basis for setting standards for their staff. The NHS Management Executive, which is responsible for ensuring that there is a strong accountability and management framework at all levels of the NHS, has taken a number of steps to strengthen financial management across the NHS. These include guidance on the role of the director of finance; revisions to standing orders, standing financial instructions and financial directions. Measures are also being taken to strengthen internal audit.

In West Midlands regional health authority the new board has taken a range of measures to strengthen financial management and accountability procedures within the region. These actions have been closely monitored by the NHS Management Executive.

Drug and Alcohol Dependence

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance has been issued to local authorities and health authorities regarding responsibility for funding detoxification during the treatment and care of drug or alcohol dependence.

Mr. Bowis: Our guidance circular "Alcohol and Drug Services within Community Care" (LAC(93)2), which was sent to local authorities and health authorities in January 1993, makes it clear that health authorities continue to be responsible for the funding of the health care element of alcohol and drug services, this would include detoxification facilities. Copies of this guidance are available in the Library.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her policy on the imposition of time limits on the funding of residential care for the treatment of drug or alcohol dependence.

Mr. Bowis: It is for the local authority to decide, in the light of the assessed community care needs of the client concerned and the programmes offered by treatment providers, how long to fund residential care for the treatment of drug and alcohol dependence.

Health Expenditure (Southend)

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress she is making in increasing the health funds available in areas which are underfunded; and what are her proposals for improving the situation in Southend during the next three years.

Mr. Sackville: One of the most important aspects of the reforms of the national health service is the progress we have made in distributing resources fairly to regional health authorities who have previously been underfunded. It is for them to do the same for district health authorities who have not had a fair share of NHS funds taking account of their resident populations and particular local characteristics and circumstances.

The allocation of funds to South Essex health authority is the responsibility of North East Thames regional health authority, and the hon. Member may wish to contact Sir William Staveley, the chairman, for details.

Bexley Health Authority

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations she has received in respect of the funding of Bexley health authority;

(2) what representations she has received about thefunding of Queen Mary's hospital, Sidcup; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: We have received representations from a number of people, including my hon. Friend in respect of the funding of Bexley health authority and Queen Mary's hospital, Sidcup.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when she expects to announce the appointment of a chairman for the new merged Bexley and Greenwich health authority.

Dr. Mawhinney: We expect to make a decision on the chairmanship of the new merged Bexley and Greenwich health authority shortly.

Agency Services

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the expenditure on agency services for each year since 1990 for (a) regions, (b) districts and (c) NHS trusts;

(2) if she will list for each year since 1990 the expenditure on external contract staffing and consultancy service for (a) regions, (b) districts and (c) trusts.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 14 December 1993]: Since 1991-92 expenditure for agency services is defined as expenditure on external contract staffing and consultancy services which includes non-patient services provided by non-national health service bodies. Information for 1991-92 and 1992-93 is shown in the table. The figures are not comparable with those for earlier years but confirm the effectiveness of the government's policy of encouraging overall value for money in the NHS by using alternative sources to supply a range of services.

Task Forces

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many task forces she has set up since becoming Secretary of State; if she will list them; and if she will provide a breakdown of their cost.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 24 January 1994]: Task forces on the following have been set up since April 1992. Information on expenditure could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Child Abuse

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prosecutions of child abuse cases have been sent directly to the Crown court since October 1992.

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

The information readily available centrally relates to trials completed at the Crown court following the issue of a notice of transfer, under either section 53 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 (certain cases involving children) or section 4 of the Criminal Justice Act 1987 (serious fraud cases). No cases were recorded in the period 1 October to 31 December 1992. Information for 1993 will be available in the autumn.

SCOTLAND

Forestry

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes there have been in the Government's policy on forestry since the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development.

Sir Hector Monro: Our forestry policy was set out in September 1991 in the booklet "Forestry Policy for Great Britain". Last month we published "Sustainable Forestry: The UK Programme", which is a comprehensive statement of the action we are taking to promote sustainable management at home and in other countries, including the initiatives we have launched since the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money, in the form of grants for private forestry owners, the Government receive from the EC annually; and what conditions are attached to these grants with respect to promoting public access and environmental concerns.

Sir Hector Monro: The Government expect to receive £7·1 million from the European Community as co-financing of grant-aid for the afforestation of agricultural land and other forestry operations on farms in 1993-94. Agricultural land, for these purposes, includes all arable land and grassland.

To qualify for co-financing, member states have to obtain approval from the European Commission for national programmes setting out the aid schemes for which reimbursement will be sought. In Great Britain, the principal aid schemes are the woodland grant scheme and the associated farm woodland scheme and farm woodland premium scheme. Participants in these schemes are required to follow the environmental guidelines published by the Forestry Commission. In addition, the community woodland supplement, introduced in 1991 as part of the woodland grant scheme, provides grants for the creation of new woodlands near towns and cities on condition that the woodlands are open for informal public recreation. Similar arrangements apply in the schemes operated in Northern Ireland.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the timetable for community forest initiatives has been affected by the Government's plans to privatise the Forestry Commission.

Sir Hector Monro: Ministers have asked the forestry review group to review the effectiveness of the current incentives for forestry investment, to review options for the ownership and management of Forestry Commission woodlands and to make proposals for changes which would improve the effectiveness of the delivery of the Government's forestry policy objectives, having regard to our other economic and environmental policies. Ministers will await the advice of the review group before considering what action, if any, should be taken in respect of the ownership and management of the commission's woodlands. The work of the review group has not affected the progress of the community forests initiative.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the national forestry plan that was promised to the United Nations conference on environment and development in 1993 is due to be published.

Sir Hector Monro: This was published on 25 January, under the title "Sustainable Forestry: The UK Programme". A copy is in the Library.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how he intends to ensure that Britain implements the principles set out in the statement of forest principles endorsed at the UN Conference on Environment and Development.

Sir Hector Monro: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin) on 28 January, Official Report, column 461.

Livestock Farms

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest estimate of the average number of (a) suckler cows and (b) ewes for (i) the average hill unit and (ii) the average upland unit and the gross margin based on the most recent market prices.

Sir Hector Monro: The table shows the average number of suckler cows and ewes on livestock farms in the less-favoured areas as represented in the farm accounts scheme, together with the estimated 1993-94 farm gross margins.

Farm type	Average number of suckler cows	Average number of ewes	Estimated 1993-94 farm gross margin (£)

Farm Incomes

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the (a) projected and (b) actual levels of farm incomes, and the percentage increase/decrease which this represents with the previous year for (i) 1989-90, (ii) 1990-91, (iii) 1991-92, (iv) 1992-93, (v) 1993-94 and (vi) 1994-95.

Sir Hector Monro: The information requested as derived from the farm accounts scheme in Scotland, is set out in the table. No actual income levels are available for 1993-94 and neither actual nor projected income figures are available for 1994-95.

(1) The system of farm classification changed in 1992-93. The actual levels and percentage changes shown are those for the nearest comparable type or combination of types except for LFA: Mainly arable farms where there is no comparable type.

(2) Under the farm accounts scheme comparisons in income in one year compared with the previous one, both in the case of projected or actual figures, are calculated from data on exactly the same farms ie an identical sample. This sample changes between projected and actual and also between years. Hence the figures do not provide a precise comparison either between projected and actual or between years.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of Scottish farm units included in the calculations on annual farm incomes on which the level of hill livestock compensatory allowance is based for the years (a) 1989-90, (b) 1990-91, (c) 1991-92, (d) 1992-93, (e) 1993-94 and (f) 1994-95.

Sir Hector Monro: The information requested is set out in the table. No information is yet available for 1994-95.

Income forecasts in respect of	Number of businesses[1] in sample employed to calculate income forecast
1989-90	180
1990-91	191
1991-92	186
1992-93	199

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the (a) projected and (b) actual members of farmers who received hill livestock compensatory allowances for (i) 1989-90, (ii) 1990-91, (iii) 1991-92, (iv) 1993-94 and (v) 1994-95.

Sir Hector Monro: The numbers of farmers who received hill livestock compensatory allowances under the schemes from 1989 to 1993 were:

Scheme year	Number
1989	18,206
1990	18,137
1991	17,904
1992	17,903
1993	17,382

Projections of the numbers of farmers are made according to the previous year's scheme.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest estimate of farm incomes which are used to calculate the level of hill livestock compensatory allowances; and if she will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: The latest farm income estimates used in considering the level of hill livestock compensatory allowances were lodged in the House of Commons Library on 30 November 1993.

These estimates showed that incomes on livestock farms in the less favoured areas were expected to increase substantially in 1993-94. Subsequent estimates published on 31 January 1994 also show a similar level of increase overall despite the reduction in rates for hill livestock compensatory allowances.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what (a) percentage and (b) number of hill livestock compensatory allowance claimants are estimated to have volunteered information to the colleges and universities responsible for collating information on which the calculations of farm incomes are based; and what (i) percentage and (ii) number of these claimants were from the severely disadvantaged areas for (1) 1989-90, (2) 1990-91, (3) 1991-92, (4) 1992-93, (5) 1993-94 and (6) 1994-95.

Sir Hector Monro: The information requested is set out in the table. It is not possible to split the farm accounts sample between severely disadvantaged and disadvantaged areas.

Year	Total number of claimants	Number of claimants supplying incomes data	Percentage of total supplying incomes data
			Per cent.
1989	18,206	255	1·4
1990	18,137	294	1·6
1991	17,904	316	1·8
1992	17,903	318	1·8
1993	17,382	323	1·9

(1) Incomes data is supplied only for full-time businesses while the total number of claimants will include many small units.

(2) The business supplying incomes data can comprise more than one unit.

A1 (Dualling)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a further statement on the dates for the commencement and completion of the dualling of the A1 trunk road between Meadowmill and Amisfield.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The construction of a dual carriageway between Tranent and Haddington, including Meadowmill to Amisfield, is the major priority on the A1. Draft orders for this scheme, published on 30 March 1993 were the subject of a public local inquiry in June 1993. Subject to the satisfactory completion of statutory procedures, construction will be considered by the Secretary of State for inclusion within the trunk road programme for 1994-95. A specific date for the start and completion of the scheme cannot, however, be given at this time.

North-West Sutherland

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what time limit he set for the feasibility study, "A Rural Framework for North West Sutherland", in respect of (a) presentation of the draft report, (b) consultation and (c) presentation of the final report.

Sir Hector Monro: As a condition of its contribution to the funding of the feasibility study the Scottish Office Environment Department required that it be kept informed of progress on the study; have the opportunity to comment on the final draft report which was to be submitted by 31 March 1993; and receive a copy of the final report at least five working days prior to publication. These conditions were fulfilled.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of whether the feasibility study, "A Rural Framework for North West Sutherland", meets the objective which he set out on page 5 of his document, "Rural Framework 1992".

Sir Hector Monro: A main purpose of "The Scottish Office Rural Framework" was to identify a number of themes to act as a focus for thought and action about the future of rural Scotland. It was a consultation paper and did not seek to prescribe the way forward or the activities of existing organisations. It is now for the North West Sutherland council of social service and the Scottish Crofters Union to decide on whether or how to take forward its feasibility study into the possibility of restructuring itself into a rural framework organisation, having regard to the particular circumstances of north-west Sutherland and to the views and wishes of interested parties.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what conditions he attached to his part-funding of the feasibility study, "A Rural Framework for North West Sutherland".

Sir Hector Monro: The Scottish Office Environment Department contributed £1,500 towards the cost of a feasibility study into the possibility of restructuring North West Sutherland council of social service into a rural framework organisation. It did not, however, commission the study. The report of the study is the property of NWSCSS and the Scottish Crofters Union, and its implementation is a matter for them. Standard conditions were set requiring that the Scottish Office Environment Department be kept informed of progress on the study; be given the opportunity to comment on the final draft report and receive a copy of the final report prior to publication.

Self-governing Schools

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will be publishing the audit regulations covering self-governing schools.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A consultation document on the Self-Governing Schools Grant and Recovery (Scotland) Regulations 1994 was issued to a wide range of interested bodies and individuals on 17 January 1994. We have asked for responses by 18 February 1994. Once we have considered these responses, we shall bring forward final regulations as soon as possible.

Criminal Justice

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what further proposals he has for improving the Scottish criminal justice system.

Mr. Lang: I am today publishing a consultation paper entitled "Sentencing and Appeals", which seeks views on a number of proposals for improving the ability of our system of justice to deal with crime effectively and fairly. The paper seeks views on possible changes of the system of fiscal fines and the sentencing powers of the sheriff courts and invites views on the case for introduction of sentencing guidelines. It proposes revised procedures for dealing with criminal appeals and invites views on whether there is a need for change to the criteria by which criminal appeals are determined. The paper also seeks views on whether the current arrangments for dealing with alleged miscarriages of justice in Scotland are satisfactory and sets out a number of possible options for change.

The consultation paper is the fourth in a series seeking views on proposals for improving the delivery of justice in Scotland. We are inviting comments by 16 April. Copies of the consultation paper have been placed in the Library.

Sheltered Housing

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing the allocation of funds to each regional council for the provision of sheltered placement schemes in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 10 February 1994]: The grant-aided expenditure for sheltered employment for each regional authority for the years 1989-90 to 1993-94 is given in the table. GAE is the level of expenditure which is taken into account in distributing aggregate external finance to local authorities. It is, of course, for the authorities themselves to determine actual levels of expenditure on a particular service.

Disabled People

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of organisations representing disabled people to discuss comprehensive anti-discrimination legislation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 10 February 1994]: My noble and learned Friend the Minister of State met the all-party disablement group on 24 February 1993.

My right hon. Friend the Minister of State for Social Security and Disabled People is taking forward his remit from the Prime Minister to identify areas where further action, without expenditure implications, can be taken to eliminate discrimination against disabled people, within the Government's policy of tackling the problem through a programme of education, persuasion and practical help backed up by targeted legislation, as necessary.

Quarries

Mr. McMaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidelines he issues in respect of the establishment of new quarries; what plans he has to amend these guidelines; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 10 February 1994]: National planning guidelines on the working of aggregates in Scotland were issued in 1977. These guidelines which are still extant examines the various issues arising from quarry developments. The guidelines indicate that quarrying is essential to the national economy and that proposals for the extraction of aggregates and other minerals should be provided for in an environmentally acceptable manner. In the Environment White Paper "This Common Inheritance" (Cm 1200) a commitment was made to review all planning guidance. In July 1992, a draft national planning policy guideline entitled "Land for Mineral Working" was issued for consultation. The finalised version will issue in the near future and will provide the strategic context within which local authorities will provide up to date development plan policies for mineral working. Such policies will be developed in full consultation with the local community and with regard to the economic needs and environmental considerations of their area.

Sporting Rates

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of representations he received calling for the abolition of sporting rates prior to his announcement of 3 November 1993; if he will list the individuals or organisations which made such representations; and if he will place copies in the Library.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 11 February 1994]: The current rating liability of sporting rights in Scotland dates from the Sporting Lands Rating (Scotland) Act 1886. Given the long period of years over which representations on this subject have been made, it is not practicable to identify all representations received prior to my right hon. Friend's announcement, on 3 November 1993, to exempt sporting rights from rating.

Football Stadiums

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he proposes to take action to introduce a fairer system of rating of football stadiums in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 11 February 1994]: I propose to table shortly a draft order introducing a revised method of valuation for Scottish Football League club grounds.

Local Enterprise Companies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of chairpersons and board members of the local enterprise companies in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding 11 February 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave on 17 December, at col 884.

Carbon Dioxide

Mr. Dalyell: To ask sthe Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library the full text of the advice he has received from Forestry Commission scientists about the extent to which boreal forests have driven global carbon dioxide fluxes during this century, and information about the relationships with tropical deforestation.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 14 February 1994]: I have arranged for a copy of the briefing to be placed in the Library.

The Forestry Commission's research is focused on temperate rather than boreal or tropical forests. The Commission's scientists contribute to the intergovernmental panel on climate change, which was set up under the auspices of the United Nations Environment Programme and the World Meterological Organisation, and the Commission has published a research information note, No. 189, on "Climate Change: The Contribution of Forestry to Response Strategies", which summarises some of the panel's main conclusions relating to forestry. The Comsmission has also published a research information note, No. 160, on "The Storage of Carbon in Trees and Timber", which describes preliminary calculations on the amount of carbon which can be stored in different tree species. I have arranged for copies of both notes to be placed in the Library of the House.

New Towns

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people are currently on the waiting lists for housing in each of Scotland's new towns.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 15 February 1994]: The information is as follows:

New Town	Number of people on waiting list as at 31 January 1994
Cumbernauld	1,351
East Kilbride	4,234
Glenrothes	1,323
Irvine	1,526
Livingston	1,367

Property Lettings

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what guidance he has issued to Scotland's development corporations relating to the continued letting of properties that become vacant in light of his decision to proceed with wind-up.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 15 February 1994]: The guidance issued to development corporations in August 1992 about the disposal of their housing stocks set out a number of measures designed to increase the choice of landlords available to tenants. These included the sale of vacant properties to housing associations. The hon. Member was sent a copy of the guidance on 31 August 1992.

Housing, Irvine

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects Irvine development corporation to begin transferring properties to the Irvine housing association.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 15 February 1994]: The corporation is negotiating the transfer of newly built homes and vacant properties to Irvine housing association. The negotiations will not be concluded until after Irvine housing association is registered as a housing association by Scottish Homes. It is not, therefore, possible to set a date for the first transfer.

Planning Permission

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes are proposed to the Scottish Office's revised fee scales for applications for planning permission; how much additional revenue will be raised by the increased charges; which bodies will benefit from the increased charges; what representations he has received from local authorities relating to the charges; and what assessment he has made as to the level of the proposed charges.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 8 February 1994]: There are no proposals at present to change the revised fee scales approved by Parliament in December 1993 for introduction on 13 January 1994 and on 3 January 1995. However, the scales are kept under regular review.

Based on the latest information available, and assuming receipt of similar numbers and types of application an additional £1 million may be raised in Scotland in 1994-95. The principal beneficiary of increased charges is the tax payer because the more income local authorities raise through fees and charges the less they need support from the Government in the form of aggregate external finance or from council tax payers.

My right hon. Friend has not received any representations from local authorities in relation to the costs applicants for planning permission have to pay.

Increases are assessed having regard to information provided by planning authorities on their income and costs in handling planning applications in the preceding year, and other considerations.

WALES

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible have been (a) abolished or (b) created since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 1 February at col. 611.

Environmental Education

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ensure that within the schools' inspection framework that responsibility of schools for raising awareness and understanding of environmental and conservation issues is subject to inspection and comment.

Sir Wyn Roberts: School inspections are a matter for the Office of Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools in Wales. Inspectors have to report on the quality and standards of education in accordance with OHMCI's framework for inspections. I have asked the chief inspector to write to the hon. Member.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to change the terms of the proposed Welsh Economic Council to take account of the United Kingdom strategy for sustainable development.

Mr. Redwood: The Welsh Economic Council will be able to take account of the strategy in its deliberations.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to work with the voluntary sector to promote sustainable development.

Mr. Redwood: The Government's plans for involving the voluntary sector in working towards sustainable development are set out in the United Kingdom strategy for sustainable development published on 25 January. Within this the Welsh Office will be seeking to ensure that the voluntary sector in Wales is appropriately catered for in the United Kingdom round table and citizen's environment initiatives.

Wind Turbines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the number of local jobs that would be created in each of the travel-to-work areas adjoining the localities currently nominated for wind farm development and awaiting planning permission.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: None.

Heritage Trusts

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he will bring forward to increase the number of heritage trusts in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Government's response to the Welsh Affairs Committee report on the preservation of historic buildings and ancient monuments (Command 2416) emphasised our commitment to supporting voluntary sector activities in this area. The Department is assisting the architectural heritage fund in its efforts to encourage the establishment of further historic buildings preservation trusts in Wales. The Department's financial support in 1993-94 includes a contribution of £100,000 towards the AHF's loan fund and a grant of £11,300 towards the cost of a development officer. On 4 March I shall be addressing the AHF's conference "From Mansions to Mud-Walled Cottages", which is expected to generate further impetus.

EU Council of Ministers

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times he has attended meetings of the EU Council of Ministers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Ministerial colleagues from the lead Departments covering the subject area concerned represent our interests at meetings of the Council of the European Union and my senior officials also attend to advise those Ministers when this is relevant. My right hon. Friend the Minister of State at the Welsh Office represented the United Kingdom at the informal council on regional policy held in Liege on 12 and 13 November last year.

Sheep Scab

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many cases of sheep scab have been reported in Wales in 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Since controls on sheep scab were deregulated in June 1992, figures for the number of cases have not been collected and consequently the information is not available.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by (a) his Department and (b) his agencies (i) in the current financial year and (ii) planned for 1994-95, showing for each the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. Redwood: Promotional advertising and other campaigns run by my Department in the current financial year and which have each cost over £10,000 are as follows:

Advertising

Television	Newspapers	Radio	Outdoor[1]
None	None	None	Drink Drive

[1] Posters.

Objectives for national drink drive advertising are set and measured on a United Kingdom wide basis by the Department of Transport. Additional research activity is currently being carried out in Wales specifically to evaluate advertising activity.

Other Promotional Activity
Caring for the Future
Community Care
Council Tax
Education Charters
How Is Your Child Doing At School?
Planning Development Control
Programme for the Valleys
Sheep Annual Premium

My Department's publicity programme for 1994-95 has not yet been finalised.

Cadw is my Department's only executive agency. In 1993-94 it has undertaken no television advertising. Budgeted expenditure on other general promotional activity is £232,000, of which £95,000 is budgeted for general press advertising. For 1994-95 budgets and plans are not yet finalised. It is expected that expenditure of a broadly similar amount will be incurred, primarily directed towards the agency's "Makers of Wales" promotional campaign.

Welsh House Condition Survey

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects his Department to publish the next Welsh house condition survey.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I expect the results of the survey to be published in the spring.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to exempt public bodies from being required to put out to competitive contract activities costing less than £100,000 a year.

Mr. Redwood: No. Purchasing by public bodies should be based on value for money. Goods and services should be acquired by competition unless there are good reasons to the contrary.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each public body for which he is responsible all activities costing less than £100,000 a year, together with the appropriate payments in each case, which they contracted out for competitive tender for the latest convenient financial year.

Mr. Redwood: This information is not held centrally.

Energy Efficiency Office

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to establish a Welsh Energy Efficiency Office on the lines of those that currently exist in Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There has been a regional energy efficiency office in the Welsh Office since 1983.

Industrial Aid

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much central Government money was spent on developing industry in Wales for each year since 1979 in (a) cash price and (b) 1993-94 prices.

Mr. Redwood: Expenditure through the Welsh Office's main schemes for business support is shown in the following table. The figures do not include grant-in-aid for development agencies in Wales, nor expenditure by DTI on United Kingdom-wide schemes.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much the Welsh Office has spent on the operation of the assisted places scheme in each year since 1981; how many pupils have been covered by the scheme since 1981; and if there was any overspend on the budget allocated in each of these years.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information is as follows:

1982-83	274,777	220	—

Wind Power

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his national policy for Wales for wind farms.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government's policy is to stimulate the development of renewable energy sources, including wind power, wherever they have prospects of being economically attractive and environmentally acceptable in order to contribute to diverse, secure and sustainable energy supplies.

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many wind farms have so far been constructed, or have been approved; and for how many planning applications are pending.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: As at the beginning of February 1994, the operational status of wind farms in Wales under the non-fossil fuel renewables orders 1 and 2 was:

	Number
Generating	6
Under construction	2
Planning approved	2

Information on planning applications pending is not collected by the Welsh Office.

Equipment Thefts

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list of the equipment stolen from his Department in the last three years for which information is available; and what was the approximate value of each item.

Mr. Redwood: Details of equipment stolen from the Department during the last three financial years are set out in the following tables:

A55 Conwy Tunnel

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the original tender price for the A55 Conwy tunnel project; what is his current estimate of the final cost of the contract; and how much of any estimated increase in cost is due to matters other than price inflation provisions within the contract.

Mr. Redwood: The tender price for the main contract for the A55 Conwy crossing project was £102 million. The final cost, excluding the price inflation provision within the contract, is of the order of £144·5 million. Most of the increase reflects the unforeseen circumstances encountered during the contruction of this large and complex scheme. Price inflation provision accounts for around a further £18 million.

Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to ensure that Welsh interests are represented on the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority.

Mr. Redwood: Consideration is currently being given to appointing a suitable candidate from Wales.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Tax Allowances

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what studies have been done to assess the effects on relative living standards, work incentives and family life of phasing out married couples' income tax allowance and the additional personal allowance for lone parents.

Mr. Dorrell: No specific studies on this question have been carried out. Although tax changes in 1994 and 1995 will result in a proportionately greater tax burden for married couples and unmarried people with children, they will still pay less tax than other single people with the same incomes.

Business Expansion Scheme

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the cost in tax relief of each dwelling let under the business expansion scheme; and what estimates he has made of the amount of capital gains tax which will be lost if and when these are sold;

(2) how many dwellings let under the business expansion scheme were specifically let for the university sector; and what the proportion of business expansion scheme dwellings are assured exit schemes;

(3) how many new lettings from investments under the business expansion scheme there were in (a) each region and (b) the United Kingdom as a whole; and what percentage these figures represent of (i) all privately rented property and (ii) all rented property, for each year of its existence.

Mr. Dorrell: The average cost per dwelling of providing BES income tax relief is estimated to be about £17,500 for lettings made between 1988 and 1992. It is not possible to give a reliable estimate of the cost of exempting gains arising from disposals of BES shares from capital gains tax. Any gains arising from the sale of properties owned by BES companies are, of course, subject to corporation tax in the usual way. Information is not available centrally from administrative sources on the number of dwellings let under the BES for the university sector or the proportion of dwellings which are let through assured exit schemes. However, information from independent analysts suggests that of the total amount of investment made through BES assured tenancy public offers about 30 per cent. was invested in accommodation let for academic establishments and about 60 per cent. was in assured exit schemes. Reliable estimates by regions are available for years up to 1991-92. These and preliminary estimates for the United Kingdom total in 1992-93 are shown in the table.

Building Societies

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will list the building societies that have agreed to allow the building societies ombudsman scheme to consider home income plans cases;

(2) if he will list those building societies who were involved with home income plans; and which have refused to agree that such cases can go to the ombudsman scheme.

Mr. Nelson: I understand that the following societies have consented to an extension of the Building Societies Ombudsman's powers to cover complaints or possible complaints related to home income plans:

- Bradford and Bingley
- Britannia
- Chelsea (Capital Access Scheme mortgages on a case by case basis)
- Cheltenham and Gloucester (including complaints arising out of lending by the former Guardian, Heart of England and Portsmouth Building Societies)
- Halifax
- Melton Mowbray
- National and Provincial
- Newcastle
- Northern Rock (all complaints arise out of lending by the former Lancastrian Building Society)
- Portman (including lending by the former Wessex Building Society)
- Staffordshire (if Society cannot first resolve complaint itself)
- Woolwich (all complaints arise out of lending by the former Town and Country Building Society).

The following societies have refused:

- Bristol and West
- Kent Reliance
- Lambeth
- National Counties
- West Bromwich.

The Leeds has formally refused but is in practice co-operating on a case-by-case basis—this includes all complaints arising out of lending by Sussex County, Eastbourne Mutual or Southdown building societies.

The following societies have not yet made a firm decision:

- Alliance and Leicester
- Birmingham Midshires
- Manchester
- Nationwide.

Business Premises

Sir Terence Higgins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer under what authority district valuers may require those whose business premises are being revalued to produce audited accounts; for how many years they may be asked to produce these; within what period they may be asked to provide them; what sanctions apply in the event of non-production; and for what purpose such detailed information may be required.

Mr. Nelson: Valuation officers are empowered under paragraph 5 of schedule 9 to the Local Government Finance Act 1988, as amended, to serve a notice on a person, who is the owner or occupier of a hereditament, requesting that person to supply information, specified in the notice, that the officer reasonably believes will assist him on carrying out his statutory functions.

Accounts are asked for where rental information is sparse for the type of property in question. Valuation officers will specify a period sufficient to establish trends, but this would not normally exceed three years.

The Act provides that the information should be supplied within a period of 21 days from the date of service of the notice. There is a fine on summary conviction for failing to do so without reasonable excuse.

The information supplied will be used to establish rental values for those classes of properties in order that valuation officers may fulfil their statutory obligation to compile and maintain rating lists.

North Sea Oil

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 1 February, Official Report, columns 607-8, if he will publish a similar table of revenues from North sea oil since 1979-80, based on 1993-94 prices.

Mr. Dorrell: Revenues raised from North sea oil and gas production by category of tax since 1979-80 at 1993-94 prices have been as follows:

£ million at 1993-94 prices

Year	Petroleum revenue tax	Supplementary petroleum duty	Corporation tax		Royalty	Total

[1] 1994-95 Financial Statement and Budget Report estimate.

Tax Changes

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Peckham will receive an answer to the two questions about the effect of the 1995-96 tax changes, tabled for answer on 31 January.

Mr. Dorrell: Today.

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update his answer of 19 January, Official Report, columns 635-41, to provide similar estimates of the burden of direct and indirect taxes for 1995-96 to take account of the tax changes announced for 1995-96, assuming that other aspects of the tax regime are subject to statutory indexation and that prices rise by the amount specified in the working assumption on page 121 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1994-95" and assuming earnings growth in 1995-96 is the same as in 1994-95.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 31 January 1994]: Estimates of tax payments in 1995-96 on the basis requested are given in the table. The actual tax burden in 1995-96 will depend on decisions taken in the 1994 Budget as well as on changes in prices and earnings.

Notes to tables

1 Income tax payments are calculated on the assumption that the households receive no tax reliefs other than the standard allowances and only have income from employment. All earners, including wives, are assumed to pay Class 1 NI contributions at the contracted-in rate.

2 Since 1990-91, husbands and wives have been taxed independently. Previously the tax liability of couples depended on their joint income. To permit comparisons with earlier years, the table therefore shows income tax and National Insurance Contributions paid by a married couple as a proportion of their joint income, assuming, as in the earlier years, that where both partners are earners, the husband and wife share the relevant multiple of earnings in the ratio 60:40.

3 In order to provide comparability with 1978-79, when support for children was given partly through child tax allowance, child benefit is treated as a negative income tax for the married couple with two children.

4 Estimates of income tax and National Insurance Contributions in 1995-96 are based on the illustrative assumption of uprating 1994-95 personal allowances, tax thresholds, NIC Lower and Upper earnings limits and the level of Child Benefit in line with the assumption of 3·25 per cent. given in the 1994-95 Financial Statement and Budget Report for the increase in the Retail Price Index in 1995-96.

5 Estimates of income tax and National Insurance Contributions in 1995-96 if the 1978-79 tax regime had been indexed for inflation are based on the assumption that the 1978-79 levels of personal allowances, child tax allowances, tax thresholds, NIC Lower and Upper earnings limits and Child Benefit are indexed to 1995-96 in line with the growth in the RPI. The growth in the RPI in years beyond 1993-94 uses the assumptions for RPI increases for 1994-95 and 1995-96 contained in the 1994-95 Financial Statement and Budget Report.

6. In both cases, average earnings are taken to be the average gross weekly earnings of all full-time males on adult rates with pay unaffected by absence and are assumed to be £389·30 per week based on the earnings growth assumption of 4 per cent. for 1995-96.

7. The estimates of most indirect taxes are based on equations derived from the 1985 Family Expenditure Survey, uprated to later years using forecasts of aggregate tax receipts. Estimates of VAT on domestic fuel and power, Airline Passenger Duty and Insurance Premium Tax are based on equations using results from the 1991 and 1992 Family Expenditure Survey respectively, uprated using a similar methodology. These estimates are based on the illustrative assumption that 10 per cent. of disposable income is saved.

8. There are wide variations in spending patterns between households with the same composition and similar incomes and estimated payments of VAT and other indirect taxes are therefore approximate, even within the income range for which figures are shown. Outside this range, the margin of error is even higher and reliable estimates cannot be made. Because of sampling variation, there can be substantial differences between estimates obtained from Family Expenditure Surveys for different years.

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update his answer of 19 January, Official Report, columns 653-41 and, on the same basis as his answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar) of 22 April 1993, Official Report, columns 176-78, provide similar estimates of the burden of direct and indirect taxes that would take effect in 1994-95 if the tax rates announced for 1995-96 and contained in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1994-95", applied in 1994-95.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 31 January 1994]: Figures illustrating the hypothetical tax burdens in 1995-96 if the measures announced for 1995-96 applied in 1994-95 are given in the table. The actual burden of tax in 1995-96 will depend on decisions taken in the 1994 Budget as well as on changes in prices and earnings.

Notes to tables.

1. Income tax payments are calculated on the assumption that the households receive no tax reliefs other than the standard allowances and only have income from employment. All earners, including wives, are assumed to pay Class 1 NI contributions at the contracted-in rate.

2. Since 1990-91, husbands and wives have been taxed independently. Previously the tax liability of couples depended on their joint income. To permit comparisons with earlier years, the table therefore shows income tax and National Insurance Contributions paid by a married couple as a proportion of their joint income, assuming, as in the earlier years, that where both partners are earners, the husband and wife share the relevant multiple of earnings in the ratio 60:40.
3. In order to provide comparability with 1978-79, when support for children was given partly through child tax allowance, child benefit is treated as a negative income tax for the married couple with two children.
4. Estimates have been provided on the basis that measures for 1995-96 announced in the 1993 Budgets are implemented in 1994-95, on the basis of 1994-95 levels of earnings and prices and with other tax allowances, thresholds at 1994-95 levels. Estimates have also been provided for tax payments on the basis that the 1978-79 tax regime had been indexed for inflation in line with the growth in the RPI and applied to 1994-95 levels of earnings.
5. Average earnings are taken to be the average gross weekly earnings of all full-time males on adult rates with pay unaffected by absence and are assumed to be £374·30 a week based on the illustrative earnings growth assumption of 4 per cent. in 1994-95.
6. The estimates of most indirect taxes are based on equations derived from the 1985 Family Expenditure Survey, uprated to later years using forecasts of aggregate tax receipts. Estimates of VAT on domestic fuel and power are based on equations using results from the 1991 Family Expenditure Survey, uprated using a similar methodology. These estimates are based on the illustrative assumption that 10 per cent. of disposable income is saved.
7. There are wide variations in spending patterns between households with the same composition and similar incomes and estimated payments of VAT and other indirect taxes are therefore approximate, even within the income range for which figures are shown. Outside this range, the margin of error is even higher and reliable estimates cannot be made. Because of sampling variation, there can be substantial differences between estimates obtained from Family Expenditure Surveys for different years.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, columns 635-41, if he will provide estimates for the years 1978-79 to 1992-93 of the burden of direct and indirect taxes on a married couple, two children, and one earner on 100 per cent. of average earnings, including the impact of mortgage interest relief, if the family is assumed to have a mortgage at the average outstanding level in each year, and is paying the average mortgage interest rate.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The available information is given in the table.

Tax and mortgage payments

	1978-79	1992-93	1993-94
(i) Whole economy
Income tax	11·2	9·3	9·1
NICs	7·2	6·2	6·2
(ii) Family
Income tax	14·4	12·3	12·4
NICs	6·5	7·9	7·9
Net mortgage payments	11·8	14·0	10·8

Notes:

1. Whole economy income tax and NICs show total tax receipts on an accruals basis as a proportion of GDP. The figures for NICs include both employers' and employee contributions.
2. Family income tax payments are calculated on the assumption that the households receive no tax reliefs other than the standard allowances and only have income from employment. All earners are assumed to pay Class 1 NI contributions at the contracted-in rate.
3. In order to provide comparability with 1978-79, when support for children was given partly through child tax allowance, child benefit is treated as a deduction from income tax. Both children are assumed to be under 11 years old.
4. The calculations assume a mortgage of £33,000 in 1992-93 and 1993-94, and one of £8,400 in 1978-79. The figures for 1978-79 and 1992-93 represent broadly the same proportion of the average house price as a £33,000 mortgage today.
5. Average earnings are taken to be the average gross weekly earnings of all full-time males on adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. Average earnings stood at £92·80 per week in 1978-79 and £347·70 in 1992-93. They are assumed to grow by 3½ per cent. in 1993-94 to £359·90.

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 635, if he will (a) provide estimates for the years 1993-94 and 1994-95 of the burden of direct and indirect taxes on a married couple, one earner, two children, on 100 per cent. of the average earnings, including the impact of mortgage interest tax relief, assuming that the family has a £35,000 mortgage and that mortgage interest rates are 7·9 per cent. in 1993-94 and 7·8 per cent. in 1994-95 and (b) provide similar estimates for 1995-96 to take account of the tax changes announced for 1995-96, assuming that other aspects of the tax regime are subject to statutory indexation, that prices rise by the amount specified in the working assumption on page 121 of the Financial Statement and Budget report 1994-95, that earnings growth in 1995-96 is the same as in 1994-95 and that the family has a £35,000 mortgage and that mortgage interest rates are 7·8 per cent. in 1995-96.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 1 February 1994]: The available information is given in the table.

Tax and mortgage payments

	1993-94	1994-95	1995-96

(ii) Family
Income tax	12·4	13·1	13·7
NICs	7·9	8·8	8·8
Net mortgage payments	11·6	11·6	11·8

Notes to Table:

1. Whole economy income tax and NICs show total tax receipts on an accruals basis as a proportion of GDP. The figures for NICs include both employers' and employee contributions.
2. Family tax and mortgage payments show income tax, employee NICs and net mortgage payments for a one-earner married couple on average earnings with two children as a percentage of earnings.
3. Family income tax payments are calculated on the assumption that the households receive no tax reliefs other than the standard allowances and only have income from employment. All earners are assumed to pay Class 1 NI contributions at the contracted-in rate.
4. Child benefit is treated as a deduction from income tax.
5. Estimates of family income tax and National Insurance Contributions in 1995-96 are based on the illustrative assumption of uprating personal allowances, tax thresholds, NIC Lower and Upper earnings limits and Child Benefit in line with the assumption of 3·25 per cent. given in the 1994-95 Financial Statement and Budget Report for the increase in the Retail Price Index in 1995-96.
6. Mortgage payments are shown net of mortgage interest relief.
7. Average earnings are taken to be the average gross weekly earnings of all full-time males on adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. These are assumed to be £359·90 per week in 1993-94, £374·30 in 1994-95 and £389·30 in 1995-96, based on illustrative earnings growth assumptions of 4 per cent. per year in 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Pension Transfers

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information the Securities and Investments Board requested from FIMBRA, LAUTRO and IMRO in relation to pension transfers; what was the basis of the brief given by the Securities and Investments Board to KPMG; what action was taken by the Securities and Investments Board in investigating pension transfers by the companies directly regulated by the Securities and Investments Board; what were the terms of reference of the steering committee on pension transfers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 16 February 1994]: KPMG was asked by the Securities and Investments Board to examine in conjunction with FIMBRA, LAUTRO and IMRO the extent of compliance with regulators' requirements in the sale of lump sum pension transfers. I understand that the study was carried out on a representative sample of client files provided by those SROs. It was commissioned as a result of SIB's analysis of compliance by directly regulated firms, which indicated significant levels of non-compliance. SIB published the report on 16 December 1993. It found that, as with SIB's directly regulated firms, a large proportion of files did not contain all the material that they should have contained. SIB has stressed that it remains to be seen how far this finding is symptomatic of unsuitable advice causing financial disadvantage to investors.

A regulators steering group, chaired by the chief executive of SIB, has been charged with examining the extent of the problem and devising preventative and remedial guidelines. An advisory committee of experts, chaired by Sir Douglas Wass, has been set up to advise the SIB board on further work on pension transfers. Full terms of reference of both are set out hereafter.

Pensions Advisory Committee

1. To review the plans and proposals developed by the Regulators' Steering Group in accordance with its terms of reference, with particular regard to their practicability and to the extent to which they address the problems identified; and the first on the proposals of the Steering Group for the development of preventative measures; and the second on the full report of the Steering Group on the actions required to provide remedies for any shortcomings in the advice given to clients.

2. To submit to the SIB two reports on the outcome of its review:

3. It is understood:

(a) that members of the Advisory Board will be free to consult their "constituencies" on an informal and confidential basis during the course of its work, and

(b) that the Advisory Board will be free to publish its reports to the SIB in the event that the body does not accept its advice in whole or in part.

Regulators' Steering Group

(i) To advise on further measures necessary to ensure that future pension business involving transfers or opt outs from occupational pension schemes is conducted in accordance with applicable regulatory standards.

(ii) To develop specifications for an industry review of potential problem cases, and the priorities for tackling the review.

(iii) To clarify the scale and incidence of detriment to investors.

((iv) To consider what forms of remedy are appropriate in different sets of circumstances.

(v) To plan for co-ordinated regulatory activity where it is necessary.

(vi) To foster commitment within the investment and occupational pensions industries and the actuarial profession to the review, and to the resolution of problem cases.

To keep SIB informed of its progress on the above by means of monthly reports, and in particular to report on (i) above by 28 February 1994 and to report on overall progress by 30 June 1994.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Passports

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now arrange for the issue of a full British passport or travel documents to Mrs. Hunwicks, a constituent of the hon. Member for Ilford, South.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Mrs. Hunwicks has not acquired British citizenship and thus does not qualify for a British passport. Any application she may wish to make for a Home Office travel document will be considered on its merits.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria are applied by officials in the Passport Agency and his Department when deciding whether or not to issue passports to people living in this country for the last 30 years but who were born in the republic of Cyprus (a) before and (b) after it gained its independence.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Passport Agency issues British passports to those who qualify under the relevant nationality legislation. In the case of people born in Cyprus, this is the Cyprus Act 1960 and the British Nationality (Cyprus) Order 1960.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the Passport Agency has refused to issue a full passport to Mrs. Hunwicks, a constituent of the hon. Member for Ilford, South; and what account was taken of the issue of a British visitor's passport.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Mrs. Hunwicks has not acquired British citizenship and thus does not qualify for a British passport.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Mr. and Mrs. Hunwicks, constituents of the hon. Member for Ilford, South, first applied for passports at the Passport Office at Petty France, London; what reasons they gave for the application; when Mr. Hunwicks was given his passport; why Mrs. Hunwicks was refused a passport; and how many subsequent visits and telephone calls Mr. and Mrs. Hunwicks made to the Passport Office.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Mr. Hunwicks applied for British passports for himself and his wife on 18 January 1994 to enable them to travel to Morocco. A passport for Mr. Hunwicks was issued on 21 January. He was informed that a passport could not be issued to Mrs. Hunwicks as she has not yet acquired British citizenship. Mr. and Mrs. Hunwicks have made three visits to London passport office, and had several telephone conversations, in seeking to clarify this situation.

Temazepam

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce his decision on the conclusions reached by his Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs regarding the misuse of the hypnotic temazepam.

Mr. Maclean: I am studying the Advisory Council's conclusions in consultation with ministerial colleagues. The consultation process is taking a little longer than at first envisaged, but I hope to reach a decision shortly after Easter.

Assault

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by region the available data on the breakdown of assault victims by (i) race and (ii) religion in 1993.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by region the number of female victims of (i) sexual and (ii) physical assaults since 1990 who were assaulted by males against whom they had restraining orders.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not available centrally.

Sex Offences

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many convicted sex offenders have then gone on to offend once again after their release from prison in the last 10 years.

Mr. Maclean: The available information on the re-offending of prisoners is the reconviction rate for a "standard list" offence, as defined in appendix 4 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales 1992", within two or four years after discharge from a prison service establishment. The latest statistics are for those discharged in 1987 after completion of a prison sentence for which the principal offence was a sex offence. Of those discharged, 416 or 25 per cent. had been convicted of a further offence within two years and 540 or 32 per cent. within four years. The numbers exclude the reconviction of a small number of discharges whose criminal histories could not be traced.

Fraud

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce provisions for minimum custodial sentences linked with the amounts involved in cases of major fraud.

Mr. Maclean: We have no plans to do so.

Sheehy Inquiry

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made as to the effect on the report of the Sheehy inquiry of the members of the inquiry all being men.

Mr. Charles Wardle: None.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will answer the questions from the hon. Member for Liverpool, Walton tabled for answer on 28 January regarding the appointments he makes to public bodies.

Mr. Howard: I have no record of any question tabled by the hon. Member to my Department for answer on 28 January.

The hon. Member has received an answer to all the questions he tabled for answer on 26 January concerning public bodies.

Police Surveillance

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 13 December, Official Report, column 435, if he will review the position as respects court cases of citizens allowing their houses to be used for surveillance by the police.

Mr. Maclean: It is clear that the operation of the current rules on disclosure causes a number of problems in respect of members of the public who allow their homes to be used for surveillance by the police. The Government are reviewing this issue as part of their consideration of the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Criminal Justice about prosecution and defence disclosure.

Game Licences

Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will abolish the game licence system.

Mr. Charles Wardle: We are currently consulting interested groups on how far game licences continue to meet their original objective of combating poaching and enforcing the statutory close season and on whether there may be better means of achieving the same object.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many teachers, per London borough, are employed directly on section 11 funded projects; and what estimate he has made as to how many will lose their jobs following the change in the grants formula.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information is not maintained centrally in the form requested. The number of designated teacher posts approved for funding under section 11 grant in each London borough is shown in the table, in full-time equivalent terms.

London Borough	Number of FTE teacher posts approved
Barking and Dagenham	15·6

Westminster	95·5

Notes:
1. Figures relate to posts in full-time equivalent terms, not individuals.
2. Figures include any such posts in grant maintained schools within a borough's area

All approved posts remain eligible for grant funding. It is a matter for authorities to decide, within their overall financial provision, how they propose to proceed in the light of the reductions in section 11 funding which we regret it has been necessary to make.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the expenditure, per London borough, on section 11 projects for each of the past five years; what it will be in the current year; and what is the proposed expenditure for 1994-95.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The table shows, in relation to each London borough, and also the London Boroughs Grants Unit and, where relevant, the Inner London education authority,

(a) for the years between 1988-89 and 1992-93, grant expenditure under section 11;
(b) for 1993-94, amounts of grant under three quarterly payments so far made; and
(c) budget allocations which have been notified as the basis for grant recipients' own expenditure in 1994-95.

Since grant is currently paid on the basis of actual expenditure incurred by grant recipients, it is not possible to give grant expenditure figures for 1993-94 as a whole, or for 1994-95.

It should be noted that the later figures in relation to the Inner London education authority include grant in respect of earlier years, payment of which had been delayed due to the late submission of claims.

Prison Dogs

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the effect of the privatisation of prisons on prison dogs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 17 February 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question asking what representations have been received about the effect of the privatisation of prisons on prison dogs.

I have assumed that your Question refers to recent newspaper articles suggesting that the Prison Service intends to have the dogs destroyed. We have received a number of representations in response to these articles.

The candidacy of the Prison Dog Service for market testing has been suspended, as under present law contractors would be unable to exercise powers to stop and search inmates. The Criminal Justice and Public Order Bill would remedy this. The future of the dogs will come into question only if there is a market test and a private sector contractor wins the contract. We would expect to find alternative work placements or homes for the dogs.

Crime Detection

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish for the last convenient year details of the crime detection rate for each police force area in England and Wales, together with the equivalent rates for England as a whole and for Wales as a whole.

Mr. Maclean: The latest available information relates to 1992 and is published in table 2.11 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales 1992", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Communications Business

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans the communications business of the Home Office has to close the Ruddington head office; what are the consequences to be for the staff in the event of such closure; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he expects to initiate pre-redundancy measures as detailed in the model redundancy agreement and if necessary to offer staff the option of secondment; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will ensure that any proposed purchaser intends to respect existing terms and conditions of employment of the communicatioins business of the Home Office employees and that employees' severance terms shall not be changed without consent and that there can be no unilateral change to these terms;

(4) what conclusion he has reached on the representations made by unions at the communications business of the Home Office concerning a guarantee of redundancy money in the event that any new owner of DTELS becomes insolvent; and if he will make a statement;

(5) what is the status of the proposed sale of the communications business of the Home Office; who has managed the sale; what is the purchase consideration; and if he will make a statement;

(6) what proposals there are for the communications business of the Home Office to relocate staff presently operating at Ruddington head office to be relocated at the DTELS establishment at Stanton; and if he will make a statement;

(7) what indications he has received from any proposed purchaser of the communications business of the Home Office to maintain the recognition agreement with NUCPS, CPSA and IPMS unions; and if he will make a statement;

(8) what steps he has taken to ensure that the communications business of the Home Office shall retain its autonomy and that the privatisation process shall help to protect jobs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: DTELS, formerly the Directorate of Telecommunications, is being privatised by means of a trade sale. Price Waterhouse is the financial adviser to the Department on the sale.

National Transcommunications Ltd. has been approved as preferred bidders for DTELS and negotiations to complete the sale are under way. The purchase consideration must be treated as commercial in confidence.

NTL is not in a position to set out in detail future staffing plans for the business. These will be finalised following completion of the sale. It has announced, though, that it intends to close DTELS's existing Ruddington head office within 12 months and to transfer operations to Winchester, with some staff relocating to the existing DTELS site at nearby Stanton. Opportunities may also arise at other NTL or DTELS locations.

We have no plans to initiate pre-redundancy measures under the model redundancy agreement or to second staff in response to NTL plans. The unions have been informed that the Government's normal clean break policy on privatisation will apply and that there will be no Government underwriting of any redundancy payment which are the responsibility of NTL.

NTL has undertaken that where redundancies are necessary it will respect the procedures currently in place. Staff terms and conditions, including severance rights, are protected on transfer by the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations.

NTL has undertaken also to adhere to collective bargaining arrangements. Any proposal to change conditions of service would be discussed and agreement sought. It has confirmed that it would not seek to make unilateral changes.

The Broadcasting, Entertainment, Cinematograph and Theatre Union is the union recognised by NTL for collective bargaining. NTL recognises that existing recognition of civil service unions within DTELS transfers across. It aims though, to recognise BECTU as the sole union which represents all staff. It is understood that BECTU and the civil service unions are discussing how this might be achieved.

While it was not a requirement of sale, NTL has indicated that DTELS will operate as a separate entity within its organisation and that a separate operations structure will be maintained.

We think that DTELS is being sold to a purchaser which will meet its responsibilities to staff and customers. While NTL has indicated that there will be redundancies, privatisation ensures that for the majority there is the best prospect of long-term job security.

Sentencing (Illness)

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has for ensuring that courts are placed under a stronger duty to inquire into a convicted defendant's former medical history and circumstances where there is an application to adjourn the date of sentencing on grounds of illness.

Mr. Maclean: Courts already have a power to adjourn after conviction to enable inquiries to be made.

We are not persuaded that it is necessary to place courts under such a duty.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be the total cost to public funds of the Metropolitan police in 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: As police authority for the Metropolitan police district, I have approved estimates which provide for net revenue expenditure of £1,660·724 million in 1994-95. There will be a cash limit on current expenditure of £1,616·511 million. Capital expenditure is subject to separate control.

I have also approved the issue of a precept of £133·55 per property in band D of the council tax valuation band Metropolitan police purposes.

I have discussed the estimates for the Metropolitan police expenditure in 1994-95 with representatives of the London local authority associations.

Fire Precautions

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has received the report on the review of the Fire Precautions Act 1971 which began in July 1993; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: We received the report late in December. The report concludes that the Fire Precautions Act 1971 has been successful in its primary objective of saving lives. But it suggests that certification is no longer the only or best way of achieving fire safety and that there is room for a substantial move to self-compliance. It recommends, however, that adequate controls must be retained to maintain high standards of public protection where necessary and to enable fire authorities to target their resources at high risk premises. It recommends the removal of Crown immunity from enforcement action other than in very limited circumstances.

We will consider this report alongside the findings and recommendations of the scrutiny on fire safety enforcement which began on 17 January. However, in the meantime, we believe that it is important that all interested parties are able to consider the findings and recommendations of the review and I have today arranged for copies of the report to be placed in the Libraries of both Houses. Interested parties can obtain copies by writing to the Fire Safety Division of the Home Office, Horseferry house, Dean Ryle street, London SW1P 2AW.

Racial Chanting

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there were in (a) 1992 and (b) 1993 for racial chanting at football matches under section 3(1) of the Football (Offences) Act 1991: and how many of these prosecutions were successful.

Mr. Maclean: In England and Wales in 1992, there were 31 prosecutions under section 3 of the Football (Offences) Act 1991, 21 of which resulted in a conviction. 1993 data will not be available until the autumn.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by (a) the Lord Chancellor's Department and (b) his agencies (i) in the current financial year and (ii) planned for 1994-95, showing for each one the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Lord Chancellor's Department has conducted no television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising or promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 in the current financial year, 1993-94. No advertising or promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 are planned for 1994-95. The same applies to the two agencies for which the Lord Chancellor has responsibility—the Public Record Office and Her Majesty's Land Registry.

Royal Parks

Mr. Cormack: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what future plans he has for the royal parks.

Mr. Sproat: The royal parks are one of London's finest assets and give pleasure to millions. The Government are committed to maintaining and improving these important open spaces so that they attain the highest standards of excellence.

I have now considered the second report on the role and management of the royal parks from an independent review group, chaired by Dame Jennifer Jenkins. The group's first report considered Hyde park and Kensington gardens; this time its attention was focused on the four remaining parks in central London; St. James's park, Green park, Regent's park and Primrose hill. The group once again examined a wide range of issues and consulted many individuals and organisations. The conclusions of its report were discussed at a one-day conference.

The group's recommendations highlight the opportunities we now have to enhance the quality of the parks, and to provide for changing demands and pressures, but in doing so we must not lose sight of the fundamental purpose of the parks as places where hundreds of people can enjoy themselves in the open air. We are looking positively at the proposals in the group's report, although it is clear that some of them would involve significant changes and significant expenditure: for example, to landscape, traffic and parking. In this answer I shall describe the action we have already taken, and my proposals for taking matters forward. There will have to be detailed consultations with interested parties, including the royal household, Westminster city council, and the Crown Estate Commission, before some proposals can be implemented; some will require further study to determine whether practical solutions are possible; and the availability of financial resources will play a major part in determining the extent and timing and implementation of others.

A central theme of the Jenkins group was that the pedestrian should have priority within the parks and that the impact of traffic on the atmosphere of the parks, particularly St. James's and Green parks, should be significantly reduced.

The group highlighted the area in front of Buckingham palace—which, it should be explained, is part of St. James's park—as a prime example of the conflict between pedestrians and traffic. It recommended the creation of a pedestrian place between the palace and the Queen Victoria memorial. I am pleased to say that during the course of the last year consultants have looked at traffic and pedestrian access throughout the royal parks, and have already produced proposals for achieving this recommendation. Further detailed studies have been commissioned and when these are completed consultation will take place with all concerned.

A programme of other traffic management measures is also being developed, including additional pedestrian crossings and traffic calming methods.

On a related theme, the Jenkins group recommended that car parking should be banned from Horse Guards parade, returning the area to uncluttered open space, thus restoring one of the important vistas of St. James's park. Such a proposal will obviously require consultation with several Government Departments and other bodies. Alternative solutions to providing the necessary car parking, and the other consequential problems, would have to be found. The Royal Parks Agency is examining ways in which these problems might be resolved.

For Regent's park, the Jenkins group's main theme was the need to view the park, villas and surrounding terraces as "an integral piece of urban design", reflecting its original conception. Many bodies now have management responsibilities within the area, and I accept the group's recommendation that there should ideally be a co-ordinated management strategy for the area as a whole. In this respect the important planning function of local authorities should not be overlooked. In the first stages I propose to consult colleagues in the Department of the Environment to see how the proposal can be taken forward. I also agree that a consultative mechanism between the park management and local residents and amenity groups, who value and take an interest in the park, should be developed.

The group has put forward several proposals to improve the image of the parks to the visitor, including the introduction of suitably sited display boards, explaining features such as the heritage and wildlife of the parks, and leaflets for self-guided trails. The general signing and maps on the parks also need improvement. I welcome these ideas, together with the suggestion for increasing the parks' role in more formal education by the provision of information centres and facilities for schools. The Royal Parks Agency's design consultant has in fact already designed new map boards, and these will be installed shortly. The first leaflets have already been produced.

The group has recognised the role of royal parks in the image of London for visitors from this country and abroad, and this is reflected in its proposal for a circular walk linking all six central parks—the royal parks promenade. A leaflet showing the route and noting the important features along the way will be produced. I welcome this proposal, as does Westminster city council, which undoubtedly will have an important role to play in taking it forward. Parts of the route, such as the link through Park square and Crescent gardens, and that through Paddington, will need to be considered carefully, and several organisations will need to be consulted, if the proposal is to come to fruition.

The full cost of implementing the recommendations is not yet known as further studies are required, and we will have to consider the position of the royal parks along with other demands on the Department of National Heritage budget. The specific recommendations made in the report, to increase funding to the parks through the retention of all additional income, a special contribution from Government, to cover the cost of policing and staging national celebrations, and a contribution from the Crown Estate, will require further detailed research and discussion within the Government. Until these discussions are complete I cannot say whether the proposals in the report can, or will be, met.

I am pleased to say that considerable progress has been made towards meeting the recommendations in the group's first report on Hyde park and Kensington gardens. For example, the group felt that the Speakers' corner and Marble arch area had deteriorated, and suggested a competition for ideas to improve the area. The competition has been organised and was announced in January. In July a works management contractor was appointed and this contractor has completed a survey of all buildings and structures and drawn up a planned maintenance programme. This is the first step in reversing the deterioration in the fabric of the parks highlighted by the group. Traffic consultants have reported on traffic management within the parks and extensive consultation with local authorities and other interested parties is now taking place. The appointment of landscape architects, the establishment of the royal parks as an executive agency, and the policing of Hyde park by the Royal Parks constabulary, have been successfully completed.

The comprehensive coverage given to every aspect of the parks by the Jenkins group and the general support and constructive comment that its reports have generated have persuaded me that a review of the remaining royal parks should be carried out. I have therefore invited Dame Jennifer Jenkins to chair a group to review Greenwich, Bushey and Richmond parks. The timetable for this review is longer than that for the previous reviews; starting in March, the group's report is expected in the first half of 1995. This will allow the Royal Parks Agency time to assimilate and take action of the proposals in the first two reports.

I am most grateful for the contribution and time Dame Jennifer, and her group, have already given, and look forward to the next report.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Export Promoter Initiative

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff were seconded to his Department under the export promoter initiative on 1 April 1993, 1 October 1993 and currently; how many enterprises had been advised by such staff by each date; and how many export group visits had been organised by such staff by each date.

Mr. Needham: Total number of staff seconded to the Department under the export promoter initiative by April 1 1993 = eight; October 1 1993 = 41; currently 68.

Total number of enterprises contacted by export promoters by April 1 1993 = 54; October 1 1993 = 2,357; currently 5,467.

Export group visits include seminars organised by export promoters, trade fairs or export missions led by export promoters or accompanying Ministers: by April 1 1993 = nil; October 1 1993 = 120; currently = 195.

Approximate total number of enterprises which attended above events = 5,040.

Wind Turbines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what studies have been conducted since 1984 by his energy technology support unit on public attitudes to wind farm or wind generator cluster development in the United Kingdom; and what use he has made of any comparative studies conducted abroad.

Mr. Eggar: The following eight studies have been conducted since 1984 by the Energy Technology Support Unit on public attitudes to wind farms or wind generator cluster development. Results of relevant work conducted abroad are also noted.

Public Attitude Survey at Delabole (two studies)
Mynddy Cemmaes Windfarm Impact Assessment
Cemmaes Wind Farm Impact Study
The Visual Impact of Windfarms; Lessons from the United Kingdom NFFO Evaluation of Local Community Reaction to a Single Wind Turbine
Public reaction to a 1 MW Wind Turbine Generator
Survey of Public Attitudes towards Three Wind Turbines.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, what safety arrangements are made for the long-term storage of liquid high level radioactive waste in tanks at Sellafield.

Mr. Eggar: This is a matter for British Nuclear Fuels plc subject to the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate's views as to safety.

Colombian Coal

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what steps he has taken to verify that coal imported into the United Kingdom from Colombia has not been mined by child labour;

(2) if he will deposit in the Library the documentation he has received certifying that coal imported into the United Kingdom from Colombia is not produced with child labour;

(3) what assurances he has received directly or via PowerGen or National Power on the safety conditions in coal mines in Colombia exporting coal to the United Kingdom and on whether child labour is employed;

(4) what reports of inspections of coal mines in Colombia exporting coal to the United Kingdom have been published; and if he will give the details of publication;

(5) when was the last occasion on which he discussed the issue of Colombian coal and child labour with (a) officials of PowerGen and (b) officials of National Power;

(6) what checks have been made by his Department to confirm that no coal being mined by child labour in Colombia is being delivered to stores in that country that are used for exports of coal to the United Kingdom;

(7) if he will deposit in the Library the correspondence which has taken place between his Department and PowerGen and National Power on the issue of the importation of coal from mines in Colombia using child labour;

(8) if he will list the dates and locations of inspections which have been carried out by or on behalf of his Department of coal mines in Colombia exporting coal to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, North (Mr. Wilson) on 9 February, Official Report, column 314. Since then, I have met Dr. Pretelt, the president of Carbocol, who assured me that Colombian labour law, and mining law, prohibits women and under-18s from going underground, and that no Colombian coal for export is mined by children.

Energy

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the results of the research on the development and demonstration of energy technologies, undertaken by the energy technology support unit, will be published; and whether that appraisal will cover both the energy supply and the efficient use of energy.

Mr. Eggar: The Energy Technology Support Unit expects to publish its appraisal report, which will cover both energy supply and energy efficiency, within the next few weeks. My Department will publish a summary of the appraisal as an energy paper. This will not discuss energy efficiency technologies, since they are now a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Small Companies (Audit)

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether the effective date for commencement of the abolition of the small companies audit requirement has been fixed.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: I shall be making a statement shortly on this and other details of the relaxation of the audit requirement for small companies.

Korea

Mr. Cryer: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has made to the Korean Government regarding the increase in the tariff on textile imports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: I have written to the Korean Ministers for Finance, and for Trade, Industry and Energy expressing the dismay of the United Kingdom Government regarding this action and pointing out that this is not the action we expect of a major trading nation.

We are discussing options for action with our European partners and the Commission. Member states agree that robust and early action is necessary and at the request of member states the Commission is evaluating ways of responding.

Ferranti

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what he now expects to be the future of Ferranti; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: The receivers are discussing with a number of companies the possibility of selling the businesses which make up Ferranti International plc.

The Independent

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the possible transfer of The Independent newspaper.

Mr. Heseltine: I have received an application for my consent to acquire a controllong interest in Newspaper Publishing, owner of The Independent and The Independent on Sunday. The application relates to an offer made by a consortium consisting of Mirror Group Newspapers, the Espresso group and Promotora de Informaciones, in agreement with Mr. Andreas Whittam Smith, Mr. Adrian O'Neil and Mr. Matthew Symonds. It seeks my consent without an inquiry by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission under section 58(3)(a) of the Fair Trading Act 1973. This section gives me discretion to consent to a newspaper transfer without a Monopolies and Mergers Commission inquiry where I am satisfied that the newspaper concerned is not economic as a going concern and as a separate newspaper and that, if the paper is to continue, the case is one of urgency. I am inviting comments from interested parties by 3 March on whether I should give my consent without a Monopolies and Mergers Commission inquiry. I have placed in the Libraries of both Houses a note describing the main features of the proposed transaction and explaining how the newspaper merger provisions of the Act apply to this case.

I expect to make a further statement to the House announcing my decision following the period of public consultation.

Atomic Energy Authority

Mr. Robert Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what decisions he has made about the future of the Atomic Energy Authority.

Mr. Eggar: The consultation study I announced on 1 April was completed in the summer of 1993. Since then

I have held discussions with my colleagues and with AEA management and staff representatives about the way ahead. I have concluded that the business activities in the AEA's new commercial division are capable of privatisation and that privatisation represents the logical next step in the AEA's on-going commercial development. Decisions on the form of privatisation will be taken in due course, but there is no presumption that this should follow the present structure. The decisions taken will be based on performance in the market place and the extent to which the various options would meet customer requirements, enhance competition, help to improve United Kingdom competitiveness and maximise the return to the taxpayer. Legislation for privatisation will be brought forward in due course.

Ownership of, and responsibility for, the safe management of the AEA's nuclear liabilities, as well as certain other functions more appropriate to government, will remain in the public sector but contracts for decommissioning and radioactive waste management work will increasingly be put out to competition. I will be exploring how best to organise these activities in the longer term and will make further announcements when I am in a position to do so.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a table showing, in 1992-93 prices, the gross public spending for each year since 1990-91 and the projected expenditure for each year to 1995-96 for each executive non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department, as listed in "Public Bodies 1993".

HEALTH

Hospital Beds

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many acute beds, intensive therapy unit beds and private beds there were by region in each of the last five years;

(2) if she will give the number of intensive therapy unit beds by region in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: The information requested will be placed in the Library. Intensive therapy beds are also included in the acute beds total. Private beds are those in private acute hospitals with operating theatres and are those in other private hospitals, nursing homes and clinics registered under section 23 of the Registered Homes Act 1984.

Palliative Care

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps she is taking to monitor the implementation of Department of Health circular EL(93)14 dealing with funding arrangements for specialist palliative care needs in nursing homes;

(2) if she will list the health authorities which have formally drawn up procedures to provide nursing home-owners with information about the specialist palliative care needs of individual service users; and how the health authority will ensure that such needs are met in accordance with Department of Health circular EL(93)14;

(3) what is her assessment of the progress of implementing Department of Health circular EL(93)14 relating to funding arrangements for specialist palliative care needs in nursing homes; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: As circular EL(93)14 makes clear, where a person in a nursing home requires specialist palliative care, the provision of any such care which is additional to general nursing care is the responsibility of the appropriate health authority. Copies of the circular are available in the Library.

Arrangements for this need to be agreed locally between health and local authorities in order to deliver responsive care to patients. The Department does not formally monitor the detail of such agreements.

Last September's national community care monitoring exercise showed that collaboration between health and social services authorities is generally improving, although there is scope for some further clarification of local arrangements. Since then, as a precondition of local authorities' community care special transitional grant, we have again required them to submit evidence that they have reached agreement with health authorities over their respective responsibilities for continuing care.

Health Service Expenditure

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the level of net and gross hospital and community health service capital and net and gross national health service capital expenditure for each year since 1973-74 expressed in 1993-94 prices, adjusted by (a) the gross domestic product deflator and (b) changes in input unit costs.

Mr. Sackville: The precise information is not available in the format requested. Hospital and community health service gross current expenditure figures will be placed in the Library from 1976-77, the first year for which these figures are available. Expenditure estimates adjusted for input unit costs are not yet available at 1993-94 prices.

Market Testing

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance she has issued on market testing for clinical services to ensure the quality of services in the clinical setting;

(2) what assessment she has made as to the extent to which recommended Government guidelines for market testing were complied with in respect of the tendering process for awarding a private contract for the pathology services for the North Hertfordshire trust.

Mr. Sackville: The document "Market Testing in the National Health Service (Revised Guidance)", which set out the principles and methods to achieve quality in any service being market tested, was issued in June 1993. Copies of the document are available in the Library. The market testing of pathology services in the North Hertfordshire trust was already in train at that time. Chief executives are responsible for the proper conduct of market testing exercises in their trusts.

Electro-convulsive Therapy

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans she has for banning the use of electro-convulsive therapy on children;

(2) how many children received electro-convulsive therapy in the last year for which figures are available;

(3) how many hospitals currently use electro-convulsive therapy as part of their programme for treating mentally disturbed children.

Mr. Bowis: Treatment in any particular case is a matter for local clinical decision by the medical practitioner or practitioners involved who are familiar with the particular case and complexities of the condition. Information on the use of electro-convulsive therapy is collected not on a hospital basis but by hospital episode. According to the latest unpublished figures available, no patient under the age of 15 received ECT in 1991-92. An unpublished survey in 1992 by the child and adolescent psychiatry section of the Royal College of Psychiatrists recorded that ECT was used very rarely on those under 18 and only where patients were very ill.

Pathology Services

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice she received from the independent assessors nominated by the Royal College of Pathologists on awarding the private contract for pathology services for the North Hertfordshire trust; and what action was taken as a result of that advice.

Mr. Sackville: The advice of the assessors nominated by the Royal College of Pathologists was given in confidence to the North Hertfordshire trust. We understand that the trust has found the advice valuable in its discussions on the detail of the service to be provided under contract.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on her review of pathology services; when her report is due to be published; and what is the implication for her review of a decision to award a contract for pathology services to a private company before it is completed.

Mr. Sackville: The strategic review of pathology services is due to report to the Department in June. The Department will then consider the content of strategic guidelines for the national health service on the maintenance and development of high quality, cost-effective clinical services responsive to the needs of patients and users. The review is not intended to delay progress on local initiatives.

Psychiatric Wards

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she proposes to take to ensure that women who are admitted to psychiatric hospital are guaranteed the choice to be treated on a women-only ward if they so wish.

Mr. Bowis: The patients charter requires health authorities to provide services which respect patients' privacy, dignity and religious and cultural beliefs. In line with this the "Mental Health Key Area Handbook" advises health authorities that one of women's particular concerns is the choice of a single-sex ward or single-sex area.

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many incidents of serious assault have been reported by women who are patients in mixed psychiatric wards for each year since 1989.

Mr. Bowis: Health authorities are responsible for ensuring there is secure accommodation for all patients and incidents should be monitored locally.

Hospital Catering

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many and which hospital trusts operate two standards of catering for patients, one of which requires a payment by the patient.

Mr. Sackville: The information requested is not held centrally.

Hearing Aids (Children)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which agency is responsible for monitoring the provision and maintenance of hearing aids for (a) pre-school children, (b) children at school and (c) young people aged 16 years and above who are in full-time education; and what plans there are to change the present arrangement;

(2) which agency monitors the provision of insurance on hearing aids for children and young people; and what plans there are to change the present arrangement;

(3) if she will list the conditions under which children and young people are entitled to be provided with the most appropriate hearing aid whether or not this is part of the national health service range of hearing aids.

Mr. Bowis: Hearing aids are available under the national health service for anyone who needs one. It is for the clinician concerned to decide which aid is most appropriate in each case, whether it is from the standard range or purchased by hearing aid centres from a commercial source. As hearing aids are provided on loan there is no requirement for the patient, or in the case of a child under 16, the child's parent to insure the device. We have no plans to change these arrangements.

Hospitals

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by region (a) the hospitals that have closed since 1990 and (b) the hospitals that have opened since 1990.

Mr. Sackville: Decisions on opening or closing facilities are for local management. The Department requires formal notification only where proposed closures are contested by the community health councils.

NHS Buildings

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will undertake and publish a survey of the state of maintenance of buildings and plant of NHS hospitals in England, in order to identify any shortfalls leading to danger to patients.

Mr. Sackville: No. Since the removal of Crown immunity from the national health service in 1991, all NHS bodies are required to meet their statutory duties to make safe any hazardous buildings or plant.

Smear Tests

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women in each region were found to have been misdiagnosed as a result of the improper administration of pre-cancer smear tests in 1993.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she has taken to ensure that no further problems arise in the cervical smear testing system.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

In 1993 there were a few isolated instances where women were recalled for further tests because of inadequacies within the screening programme. These were addressed locally. The chief medical officer has recently announced a package of initiatives to strengthen quality within the programme and copies of press release 94/37 detailing these are available in the Library.

Suicide

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by region the number of suicides for each year since 1990; and if she will publish the available data on their employment status.

Mr. Bowis: The number of suicides, including undetermined deaths, in each region for the years 1990 to 1992 are shown in the table. Information on employment status at the time of death is not routinely recorded on death certificates.

Voluntary Organisations

Mrs. Wise: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many applications have been received for section 64 funding from April 1994; how many have already been processed; and how many have been refused.

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave her on 8 February at col. 197.

School Catering

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the application of the Welfare Food Amendment Regulations 1992 to schools catering for under-fives.

Mr. Sackville: The policy intention was that the 1992 amendment regulations should simply delete references in the Welfare Food Regulations 1988 to the Nurseries and Childminders Regulation Act 1948, insert appropriate references to the Children Act 1989 and incorporate other changes to harmonise with the 1989 Act. There was no intention to change any entitlement under the regulations. However, we have received legal advice that the unintended effect of the amendment regulations was to remove the possibility of schools running classes for under-fives from participating in the welfare food scheme. This means that an estimated £3·3 million including £0·52 million in Scotland and £0·18 million in Wales paid between April 1992 and April 1994 will have been paid on a basis which is incorrect on the strict interpretation of the law. In addition, a number of schools have been registered under the scheme without statutory authority. We intend to continue registering new applicants and making payments on an extra-statutory basis to ensure that schools may participate in the welfare food scheme so as to provide free milk to children under five in line with the policy intention. Appropriate statutory authority will be obtained as soon as possible. The total amount to be paid on this basis, initially estimated at a cost of £150,000 per month in England, £22,000 in Scotland and £13,000 in Wales will be reported in notes to the relevant Departments' appropriation accounts for 1993-94. There is no possibility of any child losing entitlement under the welfare food scheme as a result of the above arrangements.

District Health Authorities

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the population covered by the Winchester district health authority live in the county of Hampshire.

Mr. Sackville: The latest population estimates relate to mid-1992. At that time 99·2 per cent. of the population covered by the Winchester district health authority lived in the county of Hampshire.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the total annual budget of the Winchester district health authority;

(2) what was the total annual budget of the Basingstoke and North Hampshire district health authority;

(3) what was the total annual budget of the Portsmouth and South-East Hampshire district health authority;

(4) what was the total annual budget of the Southampton and South West Hampshire district health authority.

Mr. Sackville: Revenue expenditure in 1992-93 of these authorities was:

Authority name	Total revenue expenditure (£)
Portsmouth and South East Hampshire DHA	177,799,025
Southampton and South West Hampshire DHA	149,568,600
Winchester DHA	70,717,287
Basingstoke and North Hampshire DHA	74,965,717

Source: Annual accounts of health authorities (England) 1992-93.
Notes: The figures are provisional.
The figures shown include an amount for capital charges.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the population covered by the Basingstoke and North Hampshire district health authority live in the county of Hampshire.

Mr. Sackville: The latest population estimates relate to mid-1992. At that time 99·9 per cent. of the population covered by the Basingstoke and North Hampshire district health authority lived in the county of Hampshire. Following enlargement of the authority on 1 April 1993 this proportion was still 99·9 per cent.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the population covered by the Portsmouth and South-East Hampshire district health authority live in the county of Hampshire.

Mr. Sackville: The whole of the population covered by the Portsmouth and South East Hampshire district health authority lives in the county of Hampshire.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the population covered by the Southampton and South West Hampshire district health authority live in the county of Hampshire.

Mr. Sackville: The latest population estimates relate to mid-1992. At that time 99·9 per cent. of the population covered by the Southampton and South West Hampshire district health authority lived in the county of Hampshire.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total sum of the budgets of those general practitioner fundholders who practice in the county of Hampshire.

Dr. Mawhinney: Regional health authorities are responsible for managing the general practitioner fundholding scheme in their areas and only regional information is available centrally. For local information the hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Alastair Service, chairman of the Wessex regional health authority.

Family Health Services, Hampshire

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total budget for Hampshire family health services authority in the financial year 1993-94.

Mr. Sackville: Budgets are not set for family health services authorities as most elements of expenditure are demand-led and funded accordingly. Budgets for FHSA cash-limited expenditure are issued by regional health authorities and are not recorded centrally.

Wessex RHA

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the percentage of population covered by Wessex regional health authority who live in the county of Hampshire.

Mr. Sackville: The latest population estimates relate to mid-1992. At that time 48·1 per cent. of the population covered by Wessex regional health authority lived in the county of Hampshire. Following enlargement of the authority on 1 April 1993 this proportion became 50·5 per cent.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total annual budget for Wessex regional health authority for 1993-94.

Mr. Sackville: The current cash limit for the Wessex region in 1993-94 is £1,328,000,000.

Personal Social Services

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the English local authorities which currently have a policy of charging for personal social services other than residential care; and if she will specify which authorities charge for (a) day care, (b) home care and (c) other services.

Mr. Bowis: Local authorities are not required to inform the Department of their policies for charging for day and domiciliary services.

Bed Bureaux

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health authorities had bed bureaux in (a) 1990 and (b) 1994; and if she will list them.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for individual health authorities. The information is not available centrally.

Meningitis

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the cost has been thus far of the national publicity campaign on meningitis.

Mr. Sackville: The figure is £55,318.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the national publicity campaign on meningitis and septicaemia planned for February is going ahead.

Mr. Sackville: Yes. The chief medical officer wrote to all doctors on 3 February with an example of the new public information leaflet on meningitis and septicaemia. Further copies of the leaflet have been sent to all general practitioners to be made available to the public. Leaflets will also be issued in April to college students and there will be a further wider student distribution in September. Supplies of leaflets have also been provided for the National Meningitis Trust and Meningitis Research. Further steps are under consideration. Copies of the leaflet will be placed in the Library.

Private Treatment

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice or guidance has been issued regarding hospital staff advising patients to pay for private treatment because health authority contracts have been completed or because the waiting lists are long.

Mr. Sackville: None. The national health service will remain available to all on the basis of clinical need, not the ability to pay.

Stanley Royd Hospital

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will seek a report from the mental health task force regarding the steps that are being taken to close Stanley Royd hospital, Wakefield; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: Wakefield was one of 20 district health authorities visited recently by the mental health task force to see how purchasers and providers were approaching the replacement of the large hospitals and to draw out good practice.

The task force will issue an overview report shortly. The reprovision of the facilities at Stanley Royd is being monitored by the task force along with all the other long-stay mental illness hospitals.

Wakefield health authority and the Pontefract and Wakefield community trust are working closely with other local organisations to develop a range of residential facilities, day care, community units for the elderly and acute facilities which will enable the residents of Stanley Royd hospital to be cared for within the community and for the hospital to close in 1995. There was full consultation on the reprovision of mental illness services last year.

Family Health Services Authorities

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many staff have been employed by FHSAs for every year since their creation (a) in total and (b) by region.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 31 January 1994]: The numbers of staff employed are shown in the table.

National Curriculum Council

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the capital cost of fitting out, furnishing and decorating the premises in York formerly used by the National Curriculum Council.

Mr. Robin Squire: These costs were incurred in 1989-90 at the time the National Curriculum Council moved into the premises. The costs are not identifiable from the National Curriculum Council's published accounts but the Department's records indicate that they amounted to some £0·5 million.

Further Education Funding Council

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the total annual budget of the Further Education Funding Council for the financial year 1993-94.

Mr. Boswell: The Further Education Funding Council's total grant for 1993-94, including recurrent and capital grant, is £2·701 billion. This includes £24·9 million for the council's own running costs.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proportion of the Further Education Funding Council's budget supports institutions in Hampshire.

Mr. Boswell: The Further Education Funding Council's recurrent funding allocations to institutions for 1993-94 covered the period 1 April 1993 to 31 July 1994 and amounted to £3·201 billion. Allocations to institutions in Hampshire amounted to £100 million or about 3·1 per cent. of the total.

Nursery Education

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education on what evidence Her Majesty's Government have come to the conclusions that equal benefits can be obtained from nursery education and other forms of pre-five-year-old provision; if he will list the sources which he has considered and which evidence (a) supports and (b) does not support his conclusions; and what are his reasons for considering that the evidence in (a) above is of greater weight than that in (b) above.

Mr. Robin Squire: Evidence on the educational benefits of nursery education and other forms of pre-school provision comes from a wide variety of sources. A summary commissioned in 1985 by the then Secretary of State was published in 1988 in "Children Under Five: Educational Research and Evidence" by Margaret Clark. The findings of these and subsequent investigations are not conclusive, but overall the evidence suggests that good quality pre-school education can benefit children wherever it takes place.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received concerning the changing of the spending formula in section 11.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have been asked to reply.

We have received many representations from local authorities and associations, teacher unions, ethnic minority communities and other interested parties about the reductions in section 11 funding which we regret it has been necessary to make. Among these, there has been widespread support for the approach, which we have announced we are adopting from 1994-95, of paying grant in the form of an annual budget to each grant recipient, instead of as a fixed percentage of actual costs.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Attorney-General if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by (a) the Law Officers' Departments and (b) his agencies (i) in the current financial year and (ii) planned for 1994-95, showing for each one the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

The Attorney-General: During the current financial year the Crown Prosecution Service launched a regional public awareness campaign. The objective of the campaign is to inform the public about its role and responsibilities, as recommended by the Home Affairs Select Committee. The effectiveness of the campaign will be measured against the amount of editorial coverage in newspapers, radio and television. There have been no other advertising or promotional campaigns in the Law Officers Departments, including the Government Property Lawyers Agency, in the current year. No campaigns costing over £10,000 are at present planned for 1994-95.

Matrix Churchill

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, column 981, whether any of the Treasury Solicitor's staff engaged in assisting the Scott inquiry exercised any function in respect of, or were directly or indirectly party to, the advice offered to Government witnesses, or related witness statements in the Matrix Churchill case.

The Attorney-General: No. The two members of the Treasury Solicitor's staff who are assisting the inquiry, Mr. Christopher Muttukumaru and Ms Helen Duffy, had no involvement in the Matrix Churchill case either when serving in the Treasury Solicitor's Department or, in the case of Mr. Muttukumaru, when seconded to my Department between December 1988 and September 1991.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Attorney-General, pursuant to his answer of 17 December, Official Report, column 981, whether any of the Treasury Solicitor's staff engaged in assisting the Scott inquiry exercised any function in respect of, or were directly or indirectly party to, the giving of advice, or the receiving of information in connection with the Treasury Solicitor's shareholding in International Military Services Ltd.

The Attorney-General: No.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Attorney-General how many visits abroad the Solicitor-General made during 1993; and what was (a) the cost to public funds and (b) the purpose of each visit.

The Attorney-General: The Solicitor-General made one visit abroad during 1993. The cost to public funds was £467·51. The purpose of the visit was to discuss bilateral legal issues with the French Minister of Justice.

Treasury Solicitors

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Attorney-General whether it is usual for Treasury Solicitors to suggest amendments to witness statements of Government service employees giving evidence on behalf of the Government; what internal guidance on the giving of such advice or suggestions exists; and if he will place a copy of such advice in the Library.

The Attorney-General: Advice provided by the Treasury Solicitor's Department to its clients may include advice in relation to witness statements. No internal guidance exists on this subject.

Mr. Gordon Foxley

Mr. Straw: To ask the Attorney-General what action the Director of Public Prosecutions has taken to inquire into the circumstances in which the convicted Mr. Gordon Foxley has remained on bail and unsentenced for three months.

The Attorney-General: The granting of bail is a matter for the court. However, I understand that following his convictions on 3 November 1993 the court granted Mr. Gordon Foxley conditional bail pending sentence.

On 7 February 1994 the judge adjourned sentence to a date to be fixed due to Mr. Foxley's medical condition.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

EC Overseas Development Council

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what decisions have been taken by the Overseas Development Council of the European Community under the new powers provided by article 130 and 130A of the treaty on European Union.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The powers of the Development Council are not affected by articles 130 and 130A of the treaty on European Union, both of which refer to the internal policy of the Community.

Malaysia

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list the value of Overseas Development Administration support for the Malaysian water supply projects undertaken by Biwater for each year since 1985 and the percentage this represents for the year involved of (a) water and sewerage project beneficiaries and (b) total Overseas Development Administration-aided projects;

(2) what projects undertaken by the Biwater group of companies have had Overseas Development

Administration assistance since 1983; and if he will list the value, location and nature of the projects involved, the tendering process involved for each, and the percentage of Overseas Development Administration assistance each has represented for each year involved.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answers 8 February 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on 14 February, column 568. Of the projects listed in that reply, the Cairo Wastewater project was won after competitive tendering, and the two ATP projects for Malaysia and Sri Lanka were negotiated contracts.

The table below gives the percentage of the gross United Kingdom aid programme these three projects represented for each year involved:

Financial year	Expenditure (£m)	(of which Malaysia)	Percentage of aid programme	(of which Malaysia)
1986-87	48·610	(48·610)	3·82	(3·82)
1987-88	5·425	(5·425)	0·41	(0·41)
1988-89	3·145	(1·944)	0·21	(0·13)
1989-90	4·232	(3·475)	0·27	(0·22)

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 8 February, Official Report, column 136, what was the date of the first letter after 27 June 1988 from Her Majesty's Government to the offer of civil aid for the Pergau project to the Malaysian Government.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd [holding answer 14 February 1994]: On 10 November 1988 Her Majesty's Government indicated in a letter to the Malaysian Government that they were prepared to consider aid and trade provision support for the Pergau project, subject to appraisal. The formal written offer of support was sent to the Malaysian Government on 17 April 1989.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Stationary Cars

Mr. Cox: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he will give instructions that stationary cars that are parked in the precincts of the House of Commons are not, while they are parked, to be left with their engines running.

Mr. Michael M. Martin: This is a matter for the Serjeant at Arms, who I understand is taking action to ensure the co-operation of all drivers in keeping the exhaust emissions from their vehicles to the minimum while they are within the precincts.

Blackawton Bitter

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee how many gallons of Blackawton bitter brewed in South Hams has been supplied to the House in the last 28 days; and how much of it has been consumed.

Mr. Colin Shepherd: I shall ask the Director of Catering Services to reply to the hon. Member.

Electrical Appliances

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what is the estimated cost of labelling each electrical appliance on the parliamentary estate with a portcullis and an appliance number on a non-destructible tag; what are the reasons for labelling each of these appliances; and how many such appliances there are.

Mr. Ray Powell: These are matters for the Director of Works.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Bosnian Muslim Seventh Brigade

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the activities of the Bosnian Muslim Seventh Brigade; and if he can list the countries from which its participants come.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The brigade is believed to be near Vitez in central Bosnia. We understand that it mainly consists of Bosnians displaced by the war. There are foreign volunteers, but it is not possible to give precise information about their countries of origin.

South Africa

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs; pursuant to the answer of 26 January, Official Report, column 308, whether the Government are now in a position to give advice and assistance to South Africa on the creation of a multi-racial peacekeeping force; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We are helping the national peacekeeping force by providing the co-ordinator of the Commonwealth peacekeeping assistance group together with six military advisers and four police officers. Their role will be to advise on, and monitor, curriculum and training methods.

Morocco

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action has been taken by Her Majesty's representative in Morocco to inquire of the whereabouts of the missing Sahrawi people; and if he will give a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We regularly take up human rights issues with the Moroccan Government, both bilaterally and with our European partners. They are aware of the importance we attach to respect for human rights. A clause requiring a satisfactory human rights performance will be an important element of the new agreement which the European Union plans to negotiate with Morocco.

Yugoslavia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the number of regular Croatian forces engaged in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Nations estimated on 31 January that between 3,000 and 5,000 Croatian Army troops were deployed in Bosnia. The United Nations Secretary General has been requested to report further to the Security Council on 17 February.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the conclusion of the UNPROFOR report concerning the artillery attack on the bread queue in Sarajevo on 21 August 1992 in respect of responsibility for the attack.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We understand that the United Nations was unable to draw any conclusions from its investigation into this incident.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those (a) British aid workers and (b) British military personnel who have been killed in Bosnia-Herzegovina to date; and if he will indicate which of the factions are thought to be responsible in each case.

Mr. Douglas Hogg:

(A)
Mr. Gulam Soobiah
Mrs. Christine Wincutt
Mr. Paul Goodall

(B)
Lance Corporal Wayne Edwards

It is impossible to determine with certainty who was responsible for these tragic deaths.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the number of regular Serbian forces engaged in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have seen no evidence that regular Serbian troops are engaged in Bosnia. But we believe that Belgrade continues to give support to the Bosnian Serbs by recruiting personnel and providing equipment.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made to establish responsibility for the murder of the British aid worker, Paul Goodall, in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Bosnian Government are actively investigating the case and are providing us with progress reports.

Caribbean Countries

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what study he has made of the effect on the Caribbean economies of a collapse in their banana exports and the possibility of the illegal drugs trade filling the vacuum.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Some countries, particularly in the eastern Caribbean, are heavily dependent for foreign earnings upon their banana exports. A sudden decrease in exports would be damaging to those countries. This is one of the factors we have always borne in mind in determining our policy towards the Caribbean and towards trade in bananas.

There are problems in parts of the Caribbean related to trade in illegal drugs and we have given what assistance we can to eradicate these. We will continue to do so in the future.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what advice his officials have given Caribbean Commonwealth Governments on the introduction of election expense laws and the threat to their democracies from illegal drug money;

(2) what steps he has taken following the correspondence from the hon. Member for Isle of Wight on the lack of rules about election expenses in the constitutional or electoral laws of Commonwealth states in the Caribbean.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No advice has been given to Caribbean Commonwealth Governments on the introduction of election expense laws since none has been sought. At least one of the countries concerned, Barbados, already has such legislation in place.

The laundering of illegal drugs profits represents a serious threat to the financial and economic stability of the Caribbean. We attach much importance to removing the profits from drug trafficking, and continue to urge dependent territories and independent Caribbean countries to pass legislation to trace, freeze and confiscate these profits.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met Dame Eugenia Charles of Dominica; and if he discussed her views on the drug trade in the Caribbean and the collapse of the banana exports.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs last met Dame Eugenia Charles in September 1992. More recently she paid calls on myself and my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister for Overseas Development during a short visit to London from 4 to 10 February. On both occasions we discussed at length various issues relevant to Dominica's banana industry.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what conclusions he has drawn from the lack of a limit on election expenses in the laws of the Commonwealth countries in the Caribbean and the effect of drugs dealing money on their parliamentary elections.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Each of the Commonwealth Caribbean countries is independent and it is therefore for each of them to determine its own laws, including those relating to election expenses.

Although the drugs trade represents a serious threat to the economic and political stability of the Caribbean, we have no substantive evidence that drugs money is being used in parliamentary elections. We continue to give assistance to deal with the illegal drugs trade and to promote sound principles of good and democratic government in the region.

Poland

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Polish Government in order to secure the re-establishment of direct flights between London and Warsaw; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We remain concerned at the suspension of air services between Britain and Poland and want to see the situation resolved as soon as possible.

There have been a number of contacts with the Polish Government at official and ministerial level in an attempt to resolve the current difficulties. I hope there will be an early resumption of services.

We are anxious to secure a settlement which will be in the interests both of the airlines involved and the travelling public, and be consistent with the principles which govern aviation in the European Union.

Hong Kong

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will list the names mentioned in telegram 152 from Hong Kong to his Department dated 17 January 1985 and the teleletters from BHCM to his Department dated 18 and 23 January 1985 in connection with an arrangement made in Hong Kong between Sir John Bremridge, deputy governor of Hong Kong and Chooi Mon Sui, a representative of the Malaysian Government on 17 January 1985; and if he will place those telexes and telegrams in the Library;

(2) if he will list the names mentioned in telegrams 781 and 794 from his Department to Hong Kong dated 16 August 1983 and telegram 246 from his Department to Hong Kong dated 18 August 1983 in connection with the murder of Jalil Ibrahim in Hong Kong; and if he will place those telegrams in the Library;

Professor Glanmor Williams

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to charge tolls on the proposed third River Dee crossing and Deeside relief road; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I am aware of no such proposals. This is a matter for Clwyd county council as the responsible local highway authority.

Speech Therapy

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will clarify the legislative basis on which his Department made the statement in a letter of 21 January to the chairman of Gwynedd education committee, that the primary responsibility for the provision of speech therapy services lies with health authorities; in which guidelines these responsibilities are placed on health authorities; and what steps he takes to monitor health authority performance of such responsibilities.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The general provision of speech therapy services is the responsibility of health authorities under the National Health Service Act 1977. The level of provision is a matter for health authorities to determine in the light of local need, competing demands and resources available. The performance of health authorities is monitored during the annual review process.

In the case of a child who has a statement of special educational needs, his/her local education authority must secure any special educational provision which is required to meet those needs and is specified in the statement. Where such special educational provision includes speech therapy, this must be provided in accordance with the statement.

Learner Drivers

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what dates he consulted the Welsh Language Board on the issue of allowing the use of the letter D as a symbol for learner drivers in Wales; on what date he received a response from the board; and when he expects to be in a position to make a statement on this matter.

School Children

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will review the recent reports which have been compiled on the average attainment levels in Welsh school children between the ages of 11 and 13 years whose first language is English; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Pupil attainment arising from the 1992 pilot assessment exercise for end of key stage 3—14-year-olds—assessment in mathematics and science has been reviewed. A review of the attainments resulting from the 1993 tests for 14-year-olds was not possible because of the boycott by teachers. The outcome from this summer's statutory assessment for seven and 14-year-olds and the voluntary pilot exercise for 11-year-olds will provide information on pupil attainment in English, Welsh, mathematics and science.

School Governors

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is the total estimated cost of the survey of school governors currently being undertaken by Touche Ross management consultants on behalf of the Welsh Office; how many forms have been sent out; and for what purpose the information is being sought;

(2) when he intends to publish the information gathered through the survey of school governors undertaken by his Department; and whether each subsection and possible answer will be comprehensively included in the publication;

(3) if he will make it his policy that no disciplinary action will be taken against any school governor in Wales who refuses to fill in the survey of school governors questionnaire.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The cost of the survey of school governors in Wales is in the region of £40,000. Some 26,000 forms have been distributed to governing bodies in Wales. The survey will provide information on the background, experience, and work load of governors and will be of help to both the Welsh Office Education Department and local education authorities.

The results of the survey should be available in the summer. The exact form in which the results will be published has yet to be decided.

There is no question of any sanction whatsoever being taken against schools or governors who do not participate in the survey. Clearly the value of the survey is increased if as many governors as possible participate.

Porthmadog Bypass

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated date of commencing work on the Porthmadog bypass on the A487 trunk road; and what is the target date for opening this road.

Friend is reviewing strategic road needs in Wales and is considering the scope for bringing forward the more important improvements.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to increase annual payments to farmers in the existing environmentally sensitive areas in Wales; and what plans he has to deregulate the amount of capital grant available for conservation works in the environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Redwood: I will be announcing the revised scheme arrangements and payment rates for the Cambrian mountains extension and Lleyn peninsula ESAs shortly. Payment rates in these ESAs will be reviewed in 1996. The Cambrian mountains original ESA was revised in 1992 and will be subject to a payment review later this year. These payment reviews will include an assessment of the capital grant arrangements.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects the proposed new environmentally sensitive areas in Wales to be launched; when the first agreements will start; when the first payments will be made; and if he will make a statement.

Countryside Council for Wales

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to increase funding, in grant-in-aid, for the Countryside Council for Wales for 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The Countryside Council for Wales grant in aid for 1994-95 is £20·635 million, which represents a 4 per cent. increase on last year's provision.

Green Barriers and Belts

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to announce his policies concerning green barriers and green belts.

Sir Wyn Roberts: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is currently considering the advice of the Assembly of Welsh Counties on strategic planning guidance in Wales, including that on green barriers and belts.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no plans to close Cornton Vale prison.

Assisted Places

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much the Scottish Office has spent on the operation of the assisted places scheme in each year since 1981; how many pupils have been covered by the scheme in each year since 1981; and what overspend occurred on the budget allocated in each of these years.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information for school years 1981-82 to 1992-93 is as follows:

School sessions	Total cost (£)	Number of assisted pupils
1981-82	799,023	790
1982-83	1,718,485	1,450
1983-84	2,454,386	1,900
1984-85	3,298,461	2,265

1993-94	[1]10,099,167	[1]3,024

[1]Provisional—Final claims still to be submitted.

The Assisted Places Scheme in Scotland is cash limited and there were no overspends in budget provision for the scheme in financial years 1981-82 to 1992-93.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what level of fees was charged by each institution covered by the assisted places scheme in Scotland in the current academic year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Fees charged to the assisted places scheme by each school vary according to the income levels of individual parents whose children benefit under the scheme.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what safeguards are available to the Scottish Office to ensure that schools covered by the assisted places scheme meet recognised educational standards.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Before a school can participate in the assisted places scheme in Scotland it requires to satisfy certain criteria, including certain standards of achievement, breadth of curriculum and teachers' qualifications. The schools are also subject to inspection by Her Majesty's inspectors of schools.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the schools in Scotland which had pupils under the assisted places scheme for each academic year since 1989; how many pupils have been supported at each institution in each year; and how much it has cost the Scottish Office to provide this support in each year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is set out in the table.

[1] Provisional figures.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the annual cost to the Scottish Office of publicising and administering the operation of the assisted places scheme.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The estimated cost to the Scottish Office of administering the assisted places scheme in 1993-94 financial year is £44,000. This total includes the cost of producing the "Brief Guide for Parents" advice booklet for 1993-94 school session of £655.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment the Scottish Office has made of the assisted places scheme.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The aim of the assisted places scheme is to widen the range of educational opportunity for children by allowing them to attend independent schools which would normally be beyond the reach of their parents' financial circumstances. The Scottish Office carries out regular audit and monitoring procedures to ensure that the scheme meets the criteria set for it.

In November 1992, published results from an independent survey commissioned jointly by the Scottish Office Education Department and the Scottish Council of Independent Schools confirmed that the main policy objectives of the scheme were being achieved.

Secondary Schools

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average yearly cost of educating a pupil in each of the secondary schools in the Ayr division of Strathclyde regional council.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is set out in the table:

.. No entry.

Notes

The figures given are derived by dividing the total budgeted running cost by the school roll, where the school roll is the number of pupils on the roll at the time of the annual school census in September 1992, including pupils of any special unit, and the total budgeted school running costs are as specified by the School Board regulations in respect of the period 1 April 1993 to 31 March 1994.

No entry is given for Irvine Royal Academy because of special circumstances following a local rationalisation.

Shipping (Tariff Rebates)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list for each year from 1986-87 the amount paid under the tariff rebate subsidy scheme to each shipping company operating within the scheme;

(2) if he will list for each year from 1986-87 the shipping operators who did not reach the capping level for subventions under the tariff rebate subsidy scheme and the amount of shortfall in each case;

(3) if he will list for each year from 1986-87 the shipping operators who reached a capping level for subvention payments under the tariff rebate subsidy scheme.

Mr. Lang: Individual bulk shipping operators' TRS allocations are treated as being commercially confidential.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether, in any year since 1986-87, any shortfall in the amount of payments to a shipping operator under the tariff rebate subsidy scheme has been reallocated to another participating operator.

Mr. Lang: Yes.

Prison Cells

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each prison in Scotland the total number of cells, the number of cells without sanitation and the number of prisoners presently held.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 15 February 1994]: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Scottish Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Stephen Byers, dated 15 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Question about prisoner accommodation and prisoner numbers.

The latest available information—reflecting the position as at Friday 4 February—is set out in the table below:

Establishment	Design capacity	Cells in use	Cells in use without access to night sanitation	Prisoner population

Totals	5,746	5,185	2,291(44%)	5,324

The difference between "Design Capacity" and "Cells in Use" reflects the fact that a number of cells are not available because of redecoration or damage repair work, refurbishment (including in some cases, to provide night sanitation) or for other policy reasons (eg being retained in the event of an emergency).

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a table showing, in 1992-93 prices, the gross public spending each year from 1990-91 and the projected expenditure for each year of the national health service bodies (Scotland) as listed in "Public Bodies 1993."

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 15 February 1994]: The information is set out in the table. The figures have been adjusted to 1992-93 prices using the GDP deflator and have been taken from NHS (Scotland) summarised accounts.

Equipment Thefts

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish a list of the equipment stolen from his Department in the last three years for which information is available; and what was the approximate value of each item.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 16 February 1994]: A variety of minor items are periodically reported missing. The following more substantial items have been formally recorded since 1990 as losses to the Scottish Office which are attributable to theft.

NHS Trusts

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many hospital trusts have been approved in the Lothian health board area; and if he will list all the individuals he has appointed to these trusts with any relevant details of their experience available to him.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 14 February 1994]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which I gave to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) on 7 February 1994, Official Report, column 53. All those appointed have skills or experience relevant to the strategic management of major service providing bodies.

Nurses

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total number of (a) whole-time equivalent registered nurses, (b) whole-time equivalent unregistered nurses and (c) whole-time equivalent nurses in training in Scotland for each year from 1988 onwards.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 14 February 1994]: The information is set out in the table.

Nursing staff employed by the NHS in Scotland: at 30 September

[3] Includes auxiliaries, assistants and nursery nurses.
[4] Includes students and pupil nurses, qualified nurses undergoing further training and, from 1992 onwards, Project 2000 students.

Limb Defects

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consideration was given during the recent investigaton of the incidence of limb defects within the Ayrshire and Arran health board area undertaken by the health board, to the incidence of brain tumours occurring within the Ayrshire and Arran, and Dumfries and Galloway health board areas.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 14 February 1994]: The investigation took account of a 1992 review of brain tumours in the health board area during the period 1975-90 and concluded that there was no evidence of a common factor linking cases of brain tumour with cases of upper limb reduction defect. Both studies related exclusively to the Ayrshire and Arran health board area.

EMPLOYMENT

Foreign Nationals

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has to improve the working conditions of foreign nationals brought into the country as personal servants on restricted entry conditions.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In general, conditions of work are a matter for negotiation and agreement between employers and their employees, without Government intervention. This applies whatever the nationalities of the parties. Domestic workers from overseas have the same employment protection rights as resident United Kingdom employees. The criteria under which these workers are admitted to the United Kingdom are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department, but I understand that overseas domestic work s receive a leaflet explaining their rights in the United Kingdom and where to get help before they enter the country.

Hampshire TEC

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total budget of Hampshire training and enterprise council for the year 1993-94.

Miss Widdecombe: The total sum of money available to the Hampshire training and enterprise council, for the performance of its contract with the Secretary of State in the year 1993-94, is £39,197,414.

Restart

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many restart interviews have so far been conducted; what numbers were referred to each menu option; what numbers actually took up their referral; what numbers were referred to the unemployment benefit service for non-attendance at an interview; what numbers were referred to the unemployment benefit service for non-availability; what numbers were referred to the unemployment benefit service for the refusal of suitable employment; and if he will express the numbers also as a percentage.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Frank Field, dated 17 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about how many Restart interviews have so far been conducted; what numbers were referred to each menu option and how many took up their referral; how many were sanctioned for non-attendance at interview, non-availability and refusal of suitable employment; and if the numbers can also be expressed as a percentage.

Unfortunately the information you request is not available in the level of detail you require. The reason for this is that following a review of data collected by the Employment Service (ES) we decided that the amounts of information collected about the Restart programme could be reduced, lessening the burden throughout the organisation and producing savings in administration costs. Consequently we do not now collect information on the numbers of referrals made to each menu option. Also, information about the number of Restart clients who actually took up their referral is not available separately for each menu option, but is shown "as total starts on Employment Department (ED) programmes".

The information we have available for the current year is shown in the attached table.

These figures reflect only the direct results of Restart. We do not know how many people subsequently take up a job or a place on an employment or training programme as a result of the guidance given to them at their interview.

Sign-offs, as a direct result of Client Adviser action, include: entering full-time education, starting training (not an ED programme), Youth Training, as a result of benefit disallowed, for pension purposes (no need to sign for NI credits), or those covered by home responsibilities protection (no need to sign for NI credits).

They do not include sign-offs for: found work cases, for fraud intervention, failed to sign, clients transferring their claim to another office, or any other reasons not listed above.

Starts on Employment Department programmes include Jobclub, Restart Course, Jobplan Workshop, Job Review Workshop, Training for Work, Learning for Work, Community Action, Work Trials, Business Start-Up Scheme and Job Interview Guarantee.

Similarly, we do not now collect information about the numbers of people invited to Restart interviews who were subsequently referred to adjudication authorities because of a doubt raised at their interview about their entitlement to benefit. Consequently I am unable to provide the number you requested in the final part of your question or to indicate the percentage of claims this represents. However, information about the total number of adjudication officers' decisions irrespective of source of referral is collected on a regional basis and is summarised quarterly. A copy of each summary entitled "Analysis of Adjudication Officers' Decisions" is placed in the Library of the House.

I hope this is helpful.

1993-94 Operational Year: (to end of December 1993 rounded to 100s)

Outcomes		Outcomes as percentage of Interviews
Started work	27,800	1·1
Took up other benefit	45,000	1·9

ENVIRONMENT

Biodiversity Action Plan

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his definition of the satisfactory progress referred to in paragraph 8(2) of the United Kingdom biodiversity action plan.

Mr. Atkins: Satisfactory progress will have been made when we judge there to be reasonable safeguards in support of our concerns that donor countries should retain the right to determine their financial contribitions under the biodiversity convention.

Government Car Service

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the policy of his Department regarding motor vehicles belonging to the Government car service being left with their engines running when parked; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: GCS drivers are instructed to keep the running of their vehicles' engines while parked to a minimum consistent with passenger and security requirements.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on giving preference to British-made cars in purchasing official and ministerial cars.

Mr. Baldry: The Department's official and ministerial vehicles are purchased through call-off contract arrangements which comply with EC and GATT requirements. The current vehicles are sourced from three United Kingdom-based car manufacturers. The procurement policy is kept under review.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the rules and regulations relating to the use of Government cars.

Mr. Baldry: I would refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health, the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville) on 28 January, Official Report, column 415, to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett).

Condensing Boiler Grant

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the future of the Energy Saving Trust's condensing boiler grant scheme following the Director General of Ofgas's decision on the E-factor.

Mr. Atkins: The future of the condensing boiler grant scheme is a matter for the Energy Saving Trust Ltd. and British Gas plc, and its continued funding through the E-factor is a matter for the Director General of Gas Supply.

Climate Change Convention

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what papers or proposals were submitted by the United Kingdom delegation to the intergovernmental negotiating committee for a framework convention on climate change at its meeting in Geneva that began on 7 February.

Mr. Atkins: The United Kingdom submitted the climate change programme as its report under article 12 of the framework convention on climate change, making it the first country to do so.

Ultraviolet Radiation

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will issue daily bulletins on levels of ultraviolet radiation from National Radiological Protection Board monitoring stations in the United Kingdom, and issue guidance to the public if levels become enhanced due to thinning of the ozone layer.

Mr. Atkins: The National Radiological Protection Board restarted its weekly bulletins on levels of ultraviolet radiation in the United Kingdom on 8 February 1994. UV levels are so low during this period of the year that NRPB sees no need for more frequent bulletins. My Department issues weekly bulletins on the levels of ozone over the United Kingdom and copies are placed in the Library of the House. Guidance to the public on avoiding excessive exposure to solar UV radiation is available from the Health Education Authority and the NRPB.

Women's Aid Refuges

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the women's aid refuges funded directly or indirectly by his Department that have been closed in each region since 1990.

Sir George Young: My Department funds some women's aid refuges indirectly through the Housing Corporation. I am not aware of any refuges supported in this way which have closed since 1990.

Incinerators

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what are the sulphur dioxide emission limits for power stations and incinerators of different types: and what is the frequency of monitoring undertaken of emissions of sulphur dioxide from them;

(2) if he will list the different types of incinerator according to the severity of their regulatory regimes and the criteria used for distinguishing each category.

Mr. Atkins: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has issued statutory guidance, PG notes, to local authorities on the emission limits and monitoring frequency they should specify in individual authorisations for processes subject to air pollution control under part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. The chief inspector of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has issued guidance, IPR notes, to his inspectors covering emission limits and monitoring frequency for processes subject to integrated pollution control under the 1990 Act. The following guidance notes relate to power stations and incinerators and are all in the Library of the House:

PG1/3(91) boilers and furnaces 20-50MW net rated thermal input
PG1/4(91) gas turbines 20-50MW net rated thermal input
PG5/1(92) clinical waste incineration processes under 1 tonne an hour
PG5/3(91) animal carcase incineration processes under 1 tonne an house
PG5/4(91) general waste incineration processes under 1 tonne an house
PG5/5(91) sewage sludge incineration processes under 1 tonne an house
IPR1/1 combustion processes with an aggregate net rated thermal input of 50MW or more
IPR1/2 gas turbines with an aggregate net rated thermal input of 50MW or more
IPR5/1 merchant and in-house chemical waste incineration
IPR5/2 clinical waste incineration
IPR5/3 municipal waste incineration
IPR5/4 animal carcase incineration
IPR5/11 sewage sludge incineration

IPR1/2 is under review and I am placing a copy of the latest consultation draft of proposed revisions in the Library. The Secretary of State has directed the chief inspector of HMIP to include in authorisations for new large combustion plant conditions which give effect to the emission limits contained in Council directive 88/609/EEC on the limitation of emissions of certain pollutants into the air from large combustion plants.

Almost all incinerators are controlled under part I of the Environmental Protection Act. The Environmental Protection (Prescribed Processes and Substances) Regulations 1991, SI472, as amended, lay down the criteria for determining whether an incinerator falls to integrated pollution control or air pollution control. A waste disposal licence under part I of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 is required for some aspects of an incineration process falling under air pollution control, as provided by the Disposal of Controlled Waste (Exceptions) Regulations 1991, SI 508, and for incinerators exempt from air pollution control. For incinerators not subject to integrated pollution control, any discharges to controlled waters require the consent of the National Rivers Authority under the Water Resources Act 1991.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the substances which are safe for disposal in land.

Mr. Atkins: The Department's Waste Management Paper No. 26 gives guidance on the suitability of different types of waste for landfilling. A copy is available in the Library. The Department is currently reviewing policy in this area, taking account of the best practicable environmental option for the disposal of particular waste types, and will be issuing revised guidance in due course.

Dangerous Materials

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what differences there are between the regulations governing the transport of dangerous and hazardous materials and dangerous and hazardous wastes.

Mr. Atkins: The various modal—road, rail, air and sea—regulations referring to the transport of dangerous goods are intended to ensure that dangerous goods are classified, packaged, labelled and transported safely during national and international journeys. Waste products are classified under their appropriate class of dangerous goods as set out in the UN classification system.

The 1980 special waste regulations provide a national tracking procedure, based on consignment notes, for the movement of the most harmful wastes and are intended to ensure proper disposal. In addition all who handle waste are subject to a statutory duty of care.

Council Tax

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the number of appeals against council tax (a) received, (b) conceded, (c) rejected and (d) outstanding by valuation district since the introduction of the tax.

Mr. Baldry: I am placing in the Library a table which sets out, by valuation office region, and by billing authority, the number of proposals to alter the valuation list which were received by the end of the initial appeal period on 30 November 1993, the number settled by 31 January 1994, and the number outstanding. Details of the number of settlements in each area which were reached by agreement and the number of proposals which were withdrawn are not collected centrally.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is (a) the number of appeals received month by month since April 1993, (b) the total number of appeals allowed, (c) the total number of appeals rejected, (d) the total number of appeals outstanding and (e) the estimated time needed to clear the outstanding appeals in respect of council tax valuations in Doncaster.

Mr. Baldry: The numbers of proposals to alter the council tax valuation list received in respect of dwellings in the Doncaster billing authority area in 1993-94 are as follows:

	Number
April	1,025
May	230
June	93
July	73
August	55
September	77
October	88
November	320
December	10
January	20
	1,991

A total of 517 cases have been resolved by agreement and 87 have been withdrawn. The remaining 1,387 are unresolved. Those which are not settled by agreement or are not withdrawn will need to be decided by the local valuation tribunal.

As I announced on 11 January, nationally we expect four out of five appeals to be dealt with before the end of 1994 and the remainder to be settled as rapidly as possible thereafter.

Homelessness (Code of Guidance)

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidance to local authorities concerning the housing provisions of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993, issued as a supplement to the current edition of the homelessness code of guidance for local authorities.

Sir George Young: I have placed in the Library of the House today a copy of the supplement to the homelessness code of guidance to local authorities which has been issued by my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Wales under section 71 of the Housing Act 1985. The supplement explains local authorities' responsibilities towards asylum seekers who apply to them for assistance under the homelessness legislation, in the light of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993. The supplement also clarifies the duties of local authorities which receive applications under the homelessness legislation from persons who have entered the United Kingdom illegally, following the Court of Appeal's judgment in the case of R v. Secretary of State for the Environment ex parte the London Borough of Tower Hamlets. Copies of the supplement are being sent to all local housing authorities in England and Wales and to the main organisations which responded to last year's consultation about a draft of this supplement.

Sulphur Dioxide Emissions

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times, and at which sites, the World Health Organisation one-hour air quality guideline for sulphur dioxide was breached in the United Kingdom in (a) 1990, (b) 1991, (c) 1992 and (d) 1993; and what evaluation his Department has undertaken of the potential effect of regulations to ban the sale of high sulphur solid fuel and to control the sale of unauthorised fuels in smoke control areas, to reduce levels of sulphur dioxide to meet World Health Organisation one-hour guidelines.

Mr. Atkins: The potential effect of regulations to ban the sale of high sulphur solid fuels and to control the sale of unauthorised fuels in smoke control areas has been considered against the statutory air quality standards for smoke and sulphur dioxide under the EC directive 80/779/EEC, and provisions of the Clean Air Act 1993. Since 1990, only one site in the United Kingdom has breached the directive's limit value for sulphur dioxide. Over the same period, exceedances of the lower World

Health Organisation one-hour guideline, which is a management indicator, not a statutory limit, were as follows:

Number of hours > 122 parts per billion

Local Government Finance

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list (a) basic credit approvals, (b) supplementary credit approvals and (c) capital grants for housing, transport, education, personal social services, other services, protective services and urban programmes for each authority and for England for each year from 1990-91 to 1994-95.

Mr. Baldry: Basic credit approvals, supplementary credit approvals and capital grants are issued by a number of Government Departments. The total amounts of credit approvals and capital grants for the various services for local authorities in England are published annually by HM Treasury at the conclusion of each public expenditure survey. Outturn information for the years 1990-91 to 1993-94 and the latest plans for 1994-95 will be published at the end of this month in the public expenditure statistical supplement to the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1994-95".

My Department issues basic credit approvals to most local authorities in England and those for 1990-91 to 1994-95 are set out in documents which are available in the Library of the House of Commons. In addition, the Department of Transport issues basic credit approvals to passenger transport authorities and the Home Office to joint fire and civil defence authorities.

Information about the supplementary credit approvals issued by my Department to individual authorities for the years 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93 is also available in the Library.

Information for individual authorities about supplementary credit approvals issued by other Departments and about capital grants is not held centrally and could be collated only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the allocation within Liverpool's standard spending assessment, on a per capita basis, for children at risk, during the next financial year; what is the allocation for the City of Birmingham; on what basis this formula operates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 16 February 1994]: The children's personal social service element for 1994-95 for Liverpool is £55 per head of resident population, that for Birmingham is £62. The formula uses a "client-group" approach where the client group is the estimated number of children at risk. Cost adjustments are made to reflect the increased costs associated with social conditions and differences in the costs of provision between areas. The formula for the children's PSS element, along with the formulae for other SSA elements, has been revised in the light of the SSA review. It is set out fully in the local government finance report, approved by the House on 3 February.

Energy Saving Grants

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the Director General of Gas Supply on his views on funding for energy saving grants; and what assessment he has made of whether the reduction or abolition of these grant schemes would affect the Government's environmental target following the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development.

Mr. Atkins: I have not met the Director-General of Gas Supply, as the funding of energy-saving expenditure through the E factor is a matter for her and British Gas plc. The Government are fully committed to the Energy Saving Trust, and the target for reducing carbon dioxide emissions by 2000.

Homelessness

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the criteria by which an individual may be classified as homeless.

Sir George Young: The criteria for determining whether a person is homeless for the purposes of part III of the Housing Act 1985 are set out in section 58 of that Act.

National Rivers Authority

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total budget of the Southern region of the National Rivers Authority for the financial year 1993-94.

Mr. Atkins: The total budget for the southern region of the National Rivers Authority for the financial year 1993-94 was £45,372,000.

Housing Expenditure, Hampshire

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total expenditure in Hampshire by the Housing Corporation in the financial year 1993-94.

Sir George Young: The Housing Corporation's latest forecast is that in 1993-94 its total expenditure in Hampshire will be £46,990,974.

Local Government Finance, Essex

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what housing capital receipts are held by each district council in Essex as at 31 March 1993.

Mr. Baldry: Information on total usable capital receipts held at 31 March 1993 is given in the tables. No comparable information is available for housing receipts alone, since local authorities are not required to account separately for such receipts.

Planning Inquiries

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes to take concerning his powers to recover from local planning authorities the costs of inspectors he appoints to hold their development plan inquiries.

Mr. Curry: The statutory provisions for local plan inquiries were originally introduced by the Town and Country Planning Act 1968. It has always been our practice to charge local planning authorities for the provision of planning inspectors to hold development plan inquiries for them. Questions have recently arisen over the legal basis for this practice. We have considered this issue very carefully, and decided that we should put the matter beyond doubt, by introducing early legislation providing powers for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to recover from local planning authorities the cost of supplying planning inspectors to hold such inquiries. Such legislation would be retrospective in order to validate payments already made and to secure fair treatment of all local planning authorities, irrespective of the timing of their local plan inquiries. The legislation would extend to Scotland.

We share the concerns of local authorities about the high level of costs associated with local plan preparation, in which the local plan inquiry is just one stage. We therefore commissioned research to examine the efficiency and effectiveness of development plan inquiries, taking into account the costs involved. We published the executive summary of the research findings and recommendations in November 1993 and invited comments from those likely to have an interest. We will be publishing the final report shortly, together with our own reaction to the recommendations in the report.

We are anxious to achieve full local plan coverage, as required by the Town and Country Planning Act 1990, as soon as possible. We therefore look forward to discussing proposals for improving the process with representatives of the local authorities and others, with a view to identifying the best way forward.

Consultancies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the value of consultancy contracts awarded by his Department each year since 1979, both in current prices and at constant 1994 prices.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 10 February 1994]: The information requested is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Local Social Services

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list in rank order those local authorities that have budgeted to spend on social services less than the standard spending assessment for social services during 1993-94, showing their standard spending assessment for social services, their budget figure for spending on social services, the amount of the planned underspend and the percentage that the planned spending is below the standard spending assessment for social services;

(2) if he will list in rank order those local authorities whose actual spending on social services was less than their standard spending assessment for social services during 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93 showing their standard spending assessment for social services, their actual spending on social services, the sum underspent and the percentage that actual spending is below the standard spending assessment.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 15 February 1994]: I have placed in the Library tables showing the requested information. It is for each local authority to determine its spending priorities between services in the light of local circumstances.

Birds of Prey (Protection)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of current legislation protecting British birds of prey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 16 February 1994]: Under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 British birds of prey are protected against taking, killing, injuring or removal from the wild in any other way, except under licence. I am satisfied that this legislation is required and appropriate. Many birds of prey, both native and non-native, are also subject to the registration and ringing requirements of section 7 and schedule 4 to the Act if held in captivity. A consultation paper was issued by the Department last April inviting comments on possible changes to these requirements. Consultation on detailed proposals affecting registration and ringing of certain hawks and other species should begin very shortly.

Equipment Thefts

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a list of the equipment stolen from his Department in the last three years for which information is available; and what was the approximate value of each item.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 16 February 1994]: During the period 1 April 1991 to the 31 January 1994 there were 85 reported thefts of equipment. The total estimated value of these stolen items was £117,256·24.

PRIME MINISTER

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Prime Minister what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on providing in full the information sought by hon. Members in parliamentary questions.

The Prime Minister: Except for matters which are confidential or on which successive Governments have refused to answer questions upon grounds of public policy, or when a reply is not given on grounds of disproportionate cost, answers should give the information sought and should be accurate and truthful and not misleading.

Ministerial Functions (Wales)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will transfer the functions of the Home Secretary in Wales to the Secretary of State for Wales.

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will publish a list of all functions of Government whose administration in respect of Wales is vested in Ministers other than the Secretary of State for Wales; which Minister is responsible in each case; and what total amount of public spending is attributable to each of those functions in Wales.

The Prime Minister: The responsibilities of each Minister of the Government are set out in the list of "Ministerial Responsibilities", of which all Members have a copy. Where responsibility for matters in Wales does not lie with the Secretary of State for Wales, Ministers in charge of other Departments exercise their responsibilities in respect of England and Wales, or the United Kingdom, as appropriate.

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 17 February.

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 17 February.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Russia

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Russia.

The Prime Minister: I visited Russia from 14 to 16 February as part of the regular practice of bilateral summits established by the partnership treaty which President Yeltsin and I signed in 1992. The Foreign Secretary accompanied me.

In Moscow I had talks with President Yeltsin and Prime Minister Chernomyrdin, and met a number of other Ministers, including Foreign Minister Kozyrev and Defence Minister Grachev. I talked to a cross-section of the newly elected parliamentarians. I also met British and Russian business men. I visited the city of Nizhny Novgorod, and announced new know-how fund projects.

President Yeltsin and I signed an agreement on the detargeting of nuclear missiles. We also agreed to hold military exercises, focused on peace-keeping, in the United Kingdom and Russia. My right hon. Friend the Foreign and Commonwealth Secretary and the Russian Foreign Minister signed agreements on double taxation and on cultural exchanges.

President Yeltsin and I agreed that we should build on the partnership between our two countries which is now based on shared democratic values. President Yeltsin has accepted my invitation to visit the United Kingdom this year. I have separately invited Prime Minister Chernomyrdin. I shall be recommending to Her Majesty the Queen that she should take up President Yeltsin's invitation to visit Russia.

An important purpose of my visit was to give practical and polital support to reform. President Yeltsin and Prime Minister Chernomyrdin assured me that economic reform would continue. But they did not underestimate the scale of the task which they face. It was clear that difficult decisions lie ahead.

I discussed a range of international issues with President Yeltsin, including Bosnia. These discussions underlined how important it is to maintain a close political dialogue with Russia. I told President Yeltsin that I would support closer political consultation between the Group of Seven and Russia.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster who are the members currently appointed to the citizens charter panel of advisers.

Mr. Waldegrave: The members currently appointed to the citizens charter panel of advisers are Sir James Blyth, chairman, Sir Christopher Bland, Angela Heylin, the Right Hon. the Baroness Perry of Southwark, Dr. Madsen Pirie, Nick Rawlings, Christopher Swan and Lady Wilcox.

Open Government

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what discussions he has had with the Treasury on the implications of the recent report of the Committee on Public Accounts for open government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government will be responding to the Public Accounts Committee report in due course.

Duchy Council

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many meetings of (a) the Duchy Council and (b) the Trustees of the Benevolent Fund were held in each year since 1987.

Mr. Waldegrave:

	Date
(a)	1988	2 meetings (January and May)
	1989	3 meetings (January, May and October)
	1990	3 meetings (January, May and October)
	1991	3 meetings (January, May and October)
	1992	2 meetings (January and May)
	1993	3 meetings (February, May and November)
		In addition to formal meetings of the full Council there were additional meetings with individual members of the council
(b)		The benevolent fund was constitued as a charity in September 1993 and the trustees have met once since then. Prior to that date, advice on donations has been given at council meetings as above.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the venues of meetings of the Duchy Council held since 1987.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Council meets in the Duchy of Lancaster office.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much members of the Duchy Council are paid; and how much each has received for travel and expenses for each year since 1987 or from the date of their appointment, if later.

Mr. Waldegrave: Members of the Duchy Council receive no remuneration as council members.

The total paid to council members for expenses incurred in visiting estates or attending meetings since 1987 has been:

Year	£
1988	1,174
1989	573
1990	337
1991	699
1992	1,228
1993	649

Records of individual payments have not been maintained and it would entail disproportionate cost to research these items.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster after what period of time minutes of the meetings of the Duchy Council are made public.

Mr. Waldegrave: Minutes of meetings of the Duchy Council are not made public.

Duchy Affairs

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many hours per week he allocates to Duchy affairs.

Mr. Waldegrave: I spend approximately 5 per cent. of my time on Duchy affairs.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Appeals

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals against decisions of child support officers have been registered by the Independent Tribunal Service; and how many have been heard, broken down by area.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the responsibility of its chief executive, Ros Hepplewhite. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Donald Dewar, dated 17 February 1994:

I am replying to your recent Paliamentary Questions asking about the number of appeals against Child Support assessments.

I understand from the Independent Tribunal Service that, to the end of January 1994, a total of 611 appeals had been lodged. Of these, 82 cases had been heard by the Child Support Appeal Tribunal. I attach a breakdown of these figures below:

	Number
Midlands	11
North East	17
North West	8
Scotland	14
South East	26
Wales and South West	6

I hope you find this reply useful.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the average time taken by the Child Support Agency to perform reviews when the client disagrees with the original child support officer's decision, broken down by area CSAC;

(2) how many parents with care have applied to the Child Support Agency pursuant to (a) section 4 and (b) section 6 of the Child Support Act 1991;

(3) of the child maintenance assessments completed to date by the Child Support Agency what proportion are (a) nil or (b) minimum assessments, and what proportion are interim assessments;

(4) what is the average time being taken by the Child Support Agency to perform reviews of assessments following a change of circumstances broken down by area CSAC.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the responsibility of its chief executive, Ros Hepplewhite. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Donald Dewar, dated 17 February 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the Child Support Agency's operations.

In the period 5 April 1993 to 31 December 1993, the Agency issued 711,000 maintenance application forms. Of these, 686,000 were issued in cases where the parent with care was in receipt of income support, family credit, or disability working allowance, and 25,000 were issued in cases where the parent with care was not receiving benefit.

In the period from 5 April 1993 to 31 December 1993, the Agency completed 121,600 maintenance assessments, of which 41,000 were interim assessments, and 28,800 were nil assessments, or assessments where the absent parent is liable to pay the minimum amount of £2·20.

You have also asked for a breakdown of the time taken to perform a review where there has been a change of circumstances, and where a client disagrees with the original child support officer's decision. During the first months of the Agency's operations, the volume of work in these areas was relatively low. Although volumes have risen in recent months, it is too early for reliable information to be available.

I hope you find this reply useful.

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will instruct the Child Support Agency not to telephone its clients at work without prior consent.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Paul Channon dated 16 February 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency telephoning clients at work.

Normally, the Agency will only telephone a client at work without prior consent where there has been no response to written correspondence and all other methods of communication have failed.

We are very aware of the sensitive nature of our work and I can assure you that staff who deal directly with the public are fully trained and equipped with the necessary skills to handle such calls with sensitivity and tact.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Case Papers

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the practice in the Benefits Agency about destroying case papers; and if he will issue guidance requiring that case papers should not be destroyed while active inquiries into a case are going on.

Mr. Burt: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my right hon. Friend.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Paul Channon, dated 16 February 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking about the practice within the Benefits Agency (BA) for destroying casepapers.

The BA policy on destruction of documents requires all Income Support (IS) cases to be examined at certain times and unnecessary documents to be destroyed. This policy represents an attempt to balance the needs of customers against the administrative expense of keeping all the documents indefinitely. There is no legal basis to the policy as the Agency, like other public bodies, is only legally required to retain samples of cases to conform with the Public Records Act.

New working methods, particularly computerisation, led to the need to review the Benefits Agency's document retention policy and a study was commissioned to consider the retention and storage of documents; the outcome of this study was to issue new guidance to all BA District Offices at the end of January 1994. This guidance reaffirms that IS casepapers are retained, as before, for a minimum of 18 months after the claim becomes dormant. It also provides clear and specific instructions to staff that casepapers should not be destroyed while active enquiries into the case are ongoing.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the average value of benefit to those in receipt of invalidity benefit in Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney and Wales.

Mr. Scott: On 4 April 1992, the latest date for which information is available, the average weekly amount of invalidity benefit for recipients in Wales was £75·43[1]. Information for Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney is not available.

Note: [1] Based on a 1 per cent. sample of claimants in Great Britain.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of existing recipients of invalidity benefit in Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney who will be disqualified under the new capacity test.

Mr. Scott: Numbers cannot be reliably estimated at this stage, but our current estimate is that around 200,000 of the people who initially transfer to incapacity benefit from invalidity benefit may fail to satisfy the test within the first two years. This estimate has not been broken down by district.

Laryngectomy

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what consideration he has given to recognising those who suffer from laryngectomy as having a disability; if he will assess sufferers' special heating requirements; if he will treat them as disabled people for purposes of VAT heating relief; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The disability living allowance advisory board is currently considering including in the "Disability Handbook" specific guidance on the care and mobility needs of people who have had a laryngectomy. Such people may be entitled to receive any of the wide range of social security benefits, including disability living allowance and attendance allowance, which are available, subject to individual circumstances. Details of the extra help in respect of VAT on domestic fuel were given in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gainsborough and Horncastle (Mr. Leigh) on 30 November 1993 at columns 437-438.

Hens

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list the grants made available for the 25 projects currently receiving funding from her Department in order to carry out research into the welfare problems associated with laying hens in intensive systems, naming the project and giving the amount of funding for each; what grants have been awarded to Horizon Farms by her Department over the last five years; and what was the size of each grant.

Mr. Soames: Projects funded by this Department and of relevance to laying hens in intensive systems address the following topics:

Subject	1993-94 costs £000
Effects of handling methods, production systems and nutrition on bone strength and bird damage in laying hens	197
Effects of battery cage design on bird condition, feather loss and bone damage	195
Welfare aspects of current husbandry practices for caged hens	17
Bird welfare in non-cage systems	233
The principles underlying motivation, cognition and learning in poultry	46
The application of motivation, cognitive and learning principles to behavioural and environmental questions relating to poultry	84
Improvement of welfare in poultry husbandry systems, housing and transport by understanding environmental and behavioural interactions	138
Electrophysiological, neuro-anatomical and behavioural studies into the perception of pain, injury and stress by poultry	177
The physiological principles causing the elicitation, assessment and reduction of fear and distress in poultry	104
Causation and consequences of stress related behaviours in poultry	126
Skeletal integrity in laying hens	100
The preslaughter transportation of poultry by road	66
Avian welfare during handling	31
Depopulation of laying hens	36
Survey of broken bones in end of lay battery hens	35
Depopulation of alternative laying systems	37
Trauma in end of lay hens	27
Destructive pecking and cannibalism in laying hens	29
Behavioural assessment of hens in improved battery cages	18
Causes of broken bones and trauma in end of lay hens	18
Mechanised handling of laying hens	96
Hen injury in alternative egg laying systems	16

In the last five years Horizon Farms has received only one grant from this Department. In November 1993 it was awarded £298,750 by the EC Commission under EC regulation 866/90 together with £59,750 from this Department towards the cost of a new egg grading and packing plant near Corby.

Agricultural Assistance

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will list her Department's current proposals for the assistance of British agriculture in the next 12 months.

Mr. Jack: British agriculture is supported by the mechanisms of the common agricultural policy. In the forthcoming negotiations to set CAP prices for 1994-95, my right hon. Friend will press for a settlement which takes full account of British farmers' interests.

British farming will in addition continue to benefit from the wide range of Ministry grant and subsidy schemes and from schemes to encourage effective marketing of agricultural products, as well as from our continuing drive to remove unnecessary regulation. Information on all these departmental activities is available in the House Library.

Farms

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what statistics she has showing net investment from retained income categorised by farm business size for (a) 1981-82 and (b) 1991-92; and what other data are published by her Ministry relating investment to farm business size.

Mr. Jack: Information on net investment in agricultural assets is collected annually from a sample of farms in the farm business survey. The net investment, including both investment from retained profits and new funds introduced, is shown as the difference between cash income and cash flow from the farming business. Estimates of these measures for 1990-91 and 1991-92 are published by type and economic size of farm in appendix 1 of "Farm Incomes in the United Kingdom 1991-92". The following table shows the averages for 1991-92 by farm business size group. Figures for 1981-82 are not available on a comparable basis.

Estimated Average Net investment (1) (£'000 per farm)

Farm size group	Average of all types of farm
Small	4·2
Medium	9·7
Large	27·6

(1) Net investment represents investment net of sales of assets using both retained profits and funds introduced from outside the farming business.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information she has relating farm size to participation in environmental schemes operated by her Ministry.

Mr. Jack: Farms of a wide range of sizes participate in our environmental schemes. For example, the average size of farms participating in those environmentally sensitive area schemes in which we require the whole farm to be entered into agreement currently ranges from 33 hectares in West Penwith to 487 hectares in the North Peak. I would also refer the hon. Gentleman to the environmentally sensitive area reports of monitoring 1991 and 1992, available in the Library of the House.

Poultry

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if she will make a statement on relative welfare standards for poultry in the United Kingdom and eastern Europe.

Mr. Soames: No information is available on welfare standards for poultry in eastern Europe. However, Slovenia has become a contracting party to the Council of Europe convention on the protection of animals kept for farming purposes, which contains general principles for safeguarding the welfare of such animals. Other eastern European countries may attend the meetings of the standing committee set up under the convention but have yet to become contracting parties to the convention.

Nuclear Waste (Dumping at Sea)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to her answer of 30 November, Official Report, column 494, whether Her Majesty's Government have yet reached a decision on whether to accept the recent London convention decision to introduce a permanent ban on the disposal of radioactive waste at sea; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shepherd: The United Kingdom will accept the formal ban on dumping low and intermediate-level radioactive waste at sea, which was adopted at the consultative meeting of the London convention in November 1993. We are already committed to a moratorium on sea dumping until 2008 under the OSPAR convention, and we have not carried out any dumping since 1983.

The United Kingdom's firm view is that decisions on disposal of waste should be taken on scientific and economic grounds. At the meeting of the London convention, the UK therefore argued against an indefinite ban, in view of the scientific and economic arguments in favour of sea dumping for certain categories of radioactive waste.

The scientific evidence shows that dumping at sea, carried out under controlled conditions, causes no harm to the marine environment and poses no threat to human health. This has been confirmed by careful monitoring over many years and studies have shown it to be the best practicable environmental option for the disposal of certain types of radioactive waste.

Nevertheless, the United Kingdom recognises that the weight of international opinion on this matter means that such dumping is not, in any event, a practical proposition. We have, therefore, decided to accept the ban.

We shall continue our own programmes of monitoring and research, and will contribute actively to the scientific re-evaluation to be carried out under the convention after 25 years. The United Kingdom will be ready to reopen discussions in the convention at any time should the weight of opinion change in favour of accepting the scientific conclusions.

Milk Marque

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress is being made in changing the Milk Marketing Board into Milk Marque; and when a decision is expected.

Mr. Jack: The Milk Marketing Board submitted amendments to its reorganisation scheme on 9 February. We shall be issuing a further consultation document as soon as we are in a position to do so. If the reorganisation scheme were to be approved the existing milk marketing scheme would come to an end on 1 November 1994.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she expects to make a decision on the schemes of reorganisation for the Milk Marketing Board; what are the outstanding issues relating to the scheme of reorganisation; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The Ministry issued a press release on 24 January which set out the position reached in discussions on the Milk Marketing Board's reorganisation scheme. On 9 February the MMB submitted amendments to its scheme, on the basis of which the Ministry and the Welsh Office are preparing a further consultation document. It will be necessary to allow interested organisations a period of four weeks in which to respond, following which my right hon. Friends the Minister and the Secretary of State for Wales will consider the board's application having regard to all the circumstances, as required under the provisions of the Agriculture Act 1993. The timing of their eventual decision cannot be predicted with certainty but is unlikely to be before the end of April.

Kew Gardens

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many living and preserved plant collections at the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, are currently fully documented on computer; and when is the planned completion date for the capture of data from existing holdings of preserved plants.

Mr. Gillian Shephard: The Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew estimates that some 200,000 of its living and preserved plant accessions are now documented on computer. There is currently no overall project or completion date for computerising information from its vast numbers of preserved plant specimens but emphasis is placed on the parts of the collection where active collaborative research programmes are being undertaken.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Residential Nursing Care

10. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received about the financial interests of families whose elderly relatives have moved into residential nursing care.

Mr. Ancram: The only representation my noble Friend has received about this matter concerned the disposal of a small farmholding by a family to meet the nursing home costs of an elderly father.

Security

11. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation in the Province.

13. Mr. Molyneaux: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons were charged with terrorist-related offences in Northern Ireland last year.

Sir John Wheeler: Since I answered a similar question on 20 January 1994 there have been three deaths, all of civilians, as a result of terrorist attacks in Northern Ireland. In addition, there have been 27 separate shooting attacks and 28 bombings and mortar attacks, all of which were intended to kill or maim, and many of which have resulted in horrific injuries to both civilians and security forces.

I resolutely condemn violence from whichever source it comes, whether from so-called loyalists or the provisional IRA. I can assure the House that the security forces will continue to pursue those responsible for these atrocities with unrelenting determination. Evidence of their continuing success is the fact that over 50 people have been charged already this year with terrorist-type offences. In 1993, 368 people were charged with serious terrorist offences, 196 firearms and 60 rocket or mortar launchers were recovered, some 6,561 kg of explosives were neutralised and 3,944 kg of unprimed explosives were also found.

Investment

14. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received about the level of future investment in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Tim Smith: In the course of my duties I receive representations from many parties within and outside Northern Ireland on the subject of future investment in the Province. They include Members of this House, local elected representatives, trade and industry associations, trade unions, voluntary and charitable institutions, professional and technical consultants and academics.

Joint Declaration

15. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about developments in security acceptance of the British-Irish joint declaration.

26. Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the progress on the Downing street declaration.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Members for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche), for Billericay (Mrs. Gorman) and for Neath (Mr. Hain).

Inter-party Talks

16. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the recent meetings that have been held with representatives of the political parties in Northern Ireland and on his new framework of ideas for a polital settlement.

17. Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the recent meetings that have been held with representatives of the political parties in Northern Ireland and on discussions he has had with the Irish Government.

23. Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the talks he has had with the parties in Northern Ireland and the Irish Government relating to Northern Ireland.

27. Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make proposals for political development.

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on progress towards the resumption of constitutional talks and his most recent discussions with the Northern Ireland parties and the Government of the Republic of Ireland on this process.

Mr. Ancram: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Hornsey and Wood Green (Mrs. Roche).

22. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects his political initiative on Northern Ireland's future to lead to further negotiations.

Mr. Ancram: The talks process has been continuing in recent months in the form of bilateral discussions with three of the four main constitutional parties in Northern Ireland and discussions with the Irish Government. My right hon. and learned Friend is meeting the leaders of the three parties concerned and discussing ideas with them for giving direction to further bilateral discussions, across all three strands. Contacts will therefore continue, in the form of bilateral meetings, for the immediate future. Our objective is to return to multilateral talks covering all three key sets of relationships and involving the two Governments and the four main constitutional parties.

Electoral System

18. Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last had discussions with the chief electoral officer for Northern Ireland to discuss changes to the electoral system.

Mr. Ancram: My predecessor, the hon. Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley), met the chief electoral officer for Northern Ireland on 3 February last year. After that meeting my hon. Friend wrote to Northern Ireland's main political parties concerning electoral matters which had been raised at the meetings on 15 December 1992 and 5 January 1993 with the parties.

Owner-occupation

19. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the level of owner-occupation in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Tim Smith: By the end of December 1992 the total number of owner-occupied properties was 363,500 or 66 per cent. of total occupied stock. Nearly 57,000 owner-occupiers have bought their houses from the Northern Ireland Housing Executive under its sales scheme while a further 12,400 have entered home-ownership through the co-ownership scheme operated by the Northern Ireland Co-ownership Housing Association.

Health Care

20. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next intends to discuss with representatives of the health service in Northern Ireland matters relating to the organisation of health care.

Mr. Ancram: My noble Friend Baroness Denton is taking forward a review of the way in which the Government's new purchasing arrangements for health and personnel social services are carried out in Northern Ireland. This review should be completed by the end of May 1994.

As part of the review there is consultation with a wide range of health and social services representatives.

Cross-border Co-operation

21. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on cross-border security co-operation between the United Kingdom and the Irish Republic.

Sir John Wheeler: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Blaby (Mr. Robathan).

Fine Defaulters

24. Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he intends to take to provide an alternative to a prison sentence for fine defaulters in Northern Ireland.

Sir John Wheeler: I have already announced my intention to introduce legislation to reinforce the requirement on courts to ascertain and take account of offenders' means when imposing fines. I believe that this will help to reduce the extent of fine default in Northern Ireland.

I am also looking at measures to reduce the use of imprisonment when fine default does occur. Various alternatives are under consideration, but I shall wish to be satisfied that they are likely to prove both practical and cost-effective.

It remains the Government's view, however, that it is necessary for imprisonment to be retained as the ultimate sanction for fine default.

Peace Representations

25. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received about the future prospects of peace in Northern Ireland from residents of Great Britain.

Mr. Ancram: The Government continue to receive a great number of letters and a number of petitions from individuals interested in the prospects for peace in Northern Ireland. In the period since the Prime Minister and the Taoiseach signed their joint declaration on 15 December last year, my right hon. and learned Friend and the Prime Minister have received almost 700 letters from residents of Great Britain on this issue. The vast majority of this correspondence expresses a heartfelt desire for peace in Northern Ireland, and a hope that the joint declaration can pave the way for that peace.

Devolved Government

28. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on devolved government and a Bill of Rights in Northern Ireland.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: The Government hope that the political talks involving the main constitutional parties in Northern Ireland and the two Governments will continue. Issues such as devolved government for Northern Ireland, and a Bill of Rights, fall within the remit of those talks described in my predecessor's statement of 26 March 1991.

Intergovernmental Council

29. Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the next meeting of the intergovernmental council is to be held; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: There are no plans at present to hold a meeting at ministerial level under the auspices of the Anglo-Irish intergovernmental council, although a working group of officials dealing with education and culture is due to meet before the summer.

Overseas Visits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many visits abroad each Minister of State made during 1993; and what was (a) the cost to public funds and (b) the purpose of each visit.

Sir John Wheeler: Ministers of State at the Northern Ireland made nine visits abroad at a total cost of just under £27,900.

The visits were:

(a) Mr. Mates
Meeting with EC Commissioner in Brussels.
An Intergovernmental Conference meeting in Dublin with other Ministers.

(b) Sir John Wheeler
Meeting in Dublin.

(c) Mr. Atkins
A transport and air exhibition in Hamburg.
A rugby international in Dublin.
A North South environmental and housing conference in Dublin.
Le Bourget air show in Paris.
Anuga Food Festival in Cologne.
A cross border trade conference in Dublin.

Driver Safety

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the review into new driver safety will be extended to Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tim Smith: I welcome the Secretary of State for Transport's proposals for ensuring the safety of newly qualified drivers. These proposals are already being considered by the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland in consultation with the Department of Transport with a view to their possible introduction in Northern Ireland.

Cars (Anti-theft Devices)

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will launch a public awareness campaign in order to encourage motorists to fit anti-theft devices to their vehicles.

Sir John Wheeler: The Government have taken a number of initiatives against car crime in Northern Ireland in recent years.

In 1991 the Northern Ireland Office launched a crime prevention campaign titled "Stopping Crime Starts With You". A key part of the campaign was the distribution of a free handbook providing advice on, inter alia, how to safeguard motor vehicles.

The Northern Ireland Office has also recently given its support to a new car-crime initiative in Northern Ireland known as "Sold Secure—The Partnership Against Car Theft", which I was pleased to help launch at the Northern Ireland motor show on 14 February. The initiative offers motorists an opportunity to obtain advice on a range of car security products which have been tested against strict criteria. The initiative is supported by the RUC and the local motor retail industry. A free leaflet is available of participating retailers.

Religious Education

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on religious education in Northern Ireland schools.

Mr. Ancram: All schools are required to provide religious education for all pupils of compulsory school age. In schools under the control of the education and library boards, such education must be undenominational and based on the holy scriptures. In voluntary schools religious education is under the control of the school managers. A compulsory core syllabus, entirely Christian in content, has been approved by all the main churches in Northern Ireland and is being introduced into all grant-aided schools on a phased basis.

Emergency Provisions

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements he has made to review the operation of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1991.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Mr. John Rowe QC has accepted my invitation to prepare a report on the operation in 1993 of the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1991. As with previous reviews, the intention is that the report should enable both Houses of Parliament to discharge effectively their responsibility to scrutinise the operation of the Act on the occasion of the annual debates on the Continuance Order, and to determine whether any of the Acts temporary provisions could be allowed to lapse on 15 June 1994.

I have asked Mr. Rowe to submit his report in sufficient time to facilitate the Houses' consideration of the Act.

Paramilitaries

Mr. A. Cecil Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many loyalist paramilitaries have been apprehended in each of the last three years;

(2) how many republican paramilitaries have been apprehended in each of the last three years.

Sir John Wheeler: The number of persons arrested in Northern Ireland under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act and the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act is as follows:

	Number
1991	1,788
1992	1,846
1993	[1]1,671

[1] Figures for arrests under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act are only available up to 30 June 1993.

Information on how many of these individuals were members of loyalist or republican groups is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The number of persons thought to be members of loyalist or republican groups who were charged with terrorist offences during each of these years is as follows:

	1991	1992	1993
Loyalist	152	191	230
Republican	239	214	137

Note:

Statistics on charges are kept according to the most serious offence with which an individual has been charged.

If the same individual is arrested or charged on more than one occasion, he/she will be added to the statistics each time.

TRANSPORT

Bicycle Loan Scheme

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the introduction by his department of a bicycle loans scheme for the central Department.

Mr. Key: Advances of salary towards the purchase of bicycles were made available in the central department on 4 January 1994. Advances, to a maximum of £350, are available to all permanent staff with over two months' service. The bicycle must be used during the journey between home and office. Advances are also available to staff in all our agencies.

44-tonne Lorries

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what safeguards he is introducing to ensure that lorries of 44 gross tonnes are travelling to or from rail heads when in commercial use; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: The higher weight limit will apply only to vehicles carrying containers or swap-bodies—loading units—to or from railheads in combined road/rail operations. No conventional road vehicles will be able to operate legitimately at 44 tonnes. In order to operate at 44 tonnes, documentary evidence will have to be carried in the vehicle to show that the loading unit has travelled, or is destined for travel, by rail.

DEFENCE

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by the Ministry of Defence and his agencies (a) in the current financial year and (b) planned for 1994-95, showing for each the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectiveness of the advertising.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Steam Ships

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of marine engineering artificers currently serving in the Royal Navy are qualified to operate (a) gas turbine and (b) steam propulsion; how many steam ships are in service in the Royal Navy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Records readily available do not show the proportion of marine engineering artificers qualified to operate gas turbine or steam propulsion systems. Records of general service marine engineering artificers serving on the trained strength in the surface fleet, however, show that 44 per cent. are qualified to operate gas turbine machinery and 26 per cent. are qualified to operate steam main propulsion machinery. Those qualified to operate steam main propulsion machinery would require further training to qualify them to operate gas turbine machinery. The Royal Navy currently operates four steam-propelled surface ships.

Mr. Aitken: The Minister of State for Defence Procurement has made 11 official visits abroad in 1993. The cost to public funds and the purpose of each visit were as follows:

Radioactive Samples

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, when radioactive samples have been sent by scheduled airline flights after British nuclear tests since 1964; if he will list the number of occasions and by what carriers such samples were sent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Air transport of radioactive materials by scheduled carrier is a routine practice, conducted under the well-established international regulations of the International Air Transport Association. Since 1964, there have been 21 occasions when radioactive samples were sent by scheduled British airline flights after British nuclear tests in the United States of America. On each occasion the samples were accompanied by staff from the Atomic Weapons Establishment.

Ferranti

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's involvement in the future of Ferranti; and when he now expects this to be resolved.

Mr. Aitken: Officials of my Department continue to have regular meetings with the receivers of Ferranti International to discuss our current and future business with the company.

I understand that the receivers have been having discussions with prospective purchasers of all or parts of the company. Which bid or bids to accept will be a matter for the receivers. Bids will then be considered under competition legislation, and my Department will be consulted in the normal way. I am unable to say how long this process may take, but I naturally hope that a satisfactory outcome will be achieved without undue delay.

Britannia Naval College (Dogs)

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the dogs kept at Britannia naval college, Dartmouth, are used for purposes other than security; and what are the number for each of those purposes.

Mr. Hanley: All dogs owned by my Department at Britannia royal naval college are used for security purposes only. A number of privately owned dogs are, however, separately accommodated at the college at no cost to public funds.

GEC-Malaysia

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions Tan Sri Arumugam, joint managing director, GEC-Malaysia has visited his Department in the past three years; and if he will list the occasions.

Mr. Aitken: Mr. Arumugam has visited my Department on three occasions over the past three years, twice in 1992 and once in 1993.

Malaysia (Bank Loans)

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what compensation has been offered to United Kingdom banks which provided the Malaysian Government with loans at concessionary rates under the terms of the memorandum of understanding of 27 September 1988.

Mr. Aitken: All defence purchases by Malaysia under the 1988 MOU have been made on a cash basis. The need for finance at concessionary interest rates has not arisen.

Reserve Forces

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he plans to complete his review of the Reserve Forces Act 1982; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: I will shortly be writing to hon. Members concerning the responses received during the consultation period, but we are unlikely to be in a position to announce final proposals until later in the year.

Minesweeping Awards

Dr. Blackburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will define the criterion for the award of the minesweeping 1945-51 clasp to the naval general service medal—1915-62; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The criterion for the award of the minesweeping 1945-51 clasp to the naval general service medal—NGSM—was defined in 1952 as "for minesweeping service afloat" in a number of qualifying areas between 3 September 1945 and a variety of terminal dates appropriate to the areas. The time qualification was defined as being six months—180 days. Time spent in home, Atlantic and Mediterranean waters between 9 May 1945 and 2 September 1945 could also be counted towards the qualifying period of six months.

The transfer of the Royal Navy's medal issuing task from Bath to Gosport in the 1970s appears to have resulted in the loss of records associated with the criterion for the issue of this clasp to the NGSM. Consequently, a new interpretation evolved, possibly based on the stricter criterion for the award of the bomb and mine clearance clasp to the NGSM for service ashore which was authorised at the same time as the minesweeping clasp: it became the practice to issue the minesweeping clasp only to claimants who could be proved to have carried out 180 days of actual minesweeping and, although it was in some cases possible to determine eligibility by reference to payment of minesweeping allowance, this did not cover minesweeping activities in far eastern waters.

The interpretation of the criterion used in recent years has been challenged by disappointed minesweeping veterans and a comprehensive investigation into their complaints has therefore been undertaken. It has proved impossible to establish how the criterion came to be redefined as requiring 180 days of actual minesweeping and it has now been decided to revert to the original 1952 criterion of six months—180 days—of minesweeping service afloat in the prescribed qualifying areas between the appropriate dates. Minesweeping service afloat is taken to mean service, in any capacity, aboard a vessel commissioned for mine counter-measure duties.

Any naval minesweeping veteran who has not previously received this award but believes he is eligible should write to the Ministry of Defence, HMS Centurion —NPP(Acs)—Grange road, Gosport, Hants., PO13 9XA. Awards will also be issued posthumously, once eligibility is confirmed, in response to applications from next of kin.

ENVIRONMENT

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much grant (a) Coventry city council, (b) Solihull metropolitan borough, (c) Walsall metropolitan borough, (d) Wandsworth borough council and (e) Westminster city council will receive this year as a result of homelessness being a factor in the standard spending assessment settlement.

Mr. Baldry: Indicators of homelessness contribute the following amounts to the specified authorities' standard spending assessments for 1994-95:

Authority	£ million
Coventry city council	−1·483
Solihull metropolitan borough	−0·155
Walsall metropolitan borough	−3·091
London borough of Wandsworth	−2·296
Westminster city council	−4·218

Homelessness is one of a large number of indicators that are included within composite indices in the personal social services and the all other services service blocks.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he received from (a) the Association of District Authorities, (b) the Association of County Councils and (c) the Association of Metropolitan Authorities about the use of nature of tenure as a proxy for disadvantaged for the purpose of standard spending assessment distribution.

Mr. Baldry: Since my right hon. Friend announced details of the provisional revenue support grant settlement for 1994-95, none of the local authority associations listed has made representations on the use of nature of housing tenure as an indicator in standard spending assessments.

Indicators of the nature of housing tenure are used in the personal social services and all other services standard spending assessments. We discussed these assessments with representatives of each of the local authority associations as part of the review of standard spending assessments for 1994-95.

School Maintenance and Equipment, Yorkshire

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many administrative staff were employed for school maintenance and equipment at (a) county hall and (b) elsewhere in the education department of North Yorkshire county council in each year since 1989.

Mr. Baldry: The information is not available centrally.

Energy Saving Grants

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has made to recent comments by the Director General of Gas Supply on funding for energy saving grants; and what assessment he has made of the effect of reduction or abolition of these grant schemes on the Government's target for carbon dioxide reductions.

Mr. Atkins: I have not responded to the Director General of Gas Supply's recent comments as the funding of energy saving expenditure through the "E" factor is a matter for her and British Gas plc. The Government are fully committed to the Energy Saving Trust, and the target for reducing carbon dioxide emissions by the year 2000.

Condensing Boiler Grant

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received on the effect of uncertainty about the continuation of the Energy Saving Trust's condensing boiler grant scheme on new equipment and installation orders; and if he will make a statement regarding future funding for the scheme.

Mr. Atkins: I have received a number of representations about the funding of the Energy Saving Trust Ltd's condensing boiler grant scheme. This is a matter for the trust, British Gas plc and the Director General of Gas Supply.

Sunderland (Public Works)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many council homes in Sunderland his Department estimates to have had the kitchen gas combustion air provision blocked off by fitted kitchen furniture;

(2) how many complaints were (a) lodged and (b) substantiated against Sunderland public works department in each year between 1983 and 1993.

Mr. Baldry: This information is not collected by the Department.

City Challenge

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures his Department has taken since 1992 to extend city challenge.

Mr. Baldry: A second round of city challenge was held in 1992—there were 20 winners bringing the total number of partnerships to 31. From April 1994 city challenge will become part of the single regeneration budget. Bids for support from the single regeneration budget will be invited in April.

Derelict Land

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress his Department has made in setting up an urban regeneration agency in order to clear up and develop derelict land since 1992.

Mr. Baldry: Following enactment of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993, the Urban Regeneration Agency was launched, under the name of English Partnerships, on 10 November 1993. At that point, it took over responsibility for the city grant programme. On 1 April 1994, it will also incorprate the derelict land grant scheme and the existing programmes of English Estates. These initiatives will in due course be combined within English Partnerships' unified financial regime.

Natural Gas Fires

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria are used when determining the return air zones when drilling ventilation holes through the front doors of council homes in the north-east for the purpose of ensuring adequate combustion in natural gas fires.

Mr. Baldry: The Building Regulations 1991 require heat-producing appliances to be so installed that there is an adequate supply of air to them for combustion and for the efficient working of any flue-pipe or chimney. Where combustion appliances are not room-sealed, the provision of an appropriately sized ventilation opening in the room or space containing the combustion appliance will satisfy the requirement. Where the opening is to an adjoining room or space, this should have an opening of the same size direct to external air. Ventilation openings should not be in fire-resisting walls. A fuller explanation of what provisions are satisfactory is given in approved document J which accompanies the regulations.

Clothes Drying Compartments

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many council homes in the north-east his Department estimates to have clothes drying compartments lined with unsealed amosite.

Mr. Baldry: This information is not available centrally and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Urban Regeneration

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures his Department has taken since 1992 to support urban development corporations in their task of urban regeneration.

Mr. Baldry: The Government have provided urban development corporations in England with a total of £895·8 million in grant in aid in the years 1992-93 and 1993-94.

UDCs have completed over 24,400 homes, more than 4,800,000 m^2 of non-housing floorspace, created nearly 140,000 job opportunities, and have attracted £12·6 billion in private investment since inception to 31 March 1993. To the end of December 1993, UDCs had added to these achievements nearly 2,200 homes, over 315,000 m^2 of non-housing floorspace, almost 14,000 jobs, and a further £368 million of private investment[1].

Two new UDCs have been established in partnership with the local authorities: at Birmingham Heartlands, to take over redundant inner-city sites in central Birmingham, including part of the former Leyland DAF site; and at Plymouth, where the principal challenge is the productive use of the Royal William yard.

UDCs have been prominent in promoting the private finance initiative: for example, they have invited joint ventures for four further schemes in addition to those at Birmingham and Plymouth. London Docklands is promoting the establishment of a combined heat and power development and a housing-led mixed development for the royal docks; Bristol UDC is seeking developers for Quay Point city centre site adjacent to Temple Meads station; and Central Manchester UDC is seeking partners for commercial or residential development of a grade 2 listed Victorian warehouse.

The Department has clarified administrative arrangements with the UDCs by issuing a "Management Statment" setting out the respective responsibilities of the UDC board, Ministers, the accounting officers and the Department.

[1] Figures included for 1993-94 are provisional.

Council Tax

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many households his Department estimate to be made up solely of a mixture of full-time students and people in receipt of income support or unemployment benefit; and how much his Department estimates such households contributed to local government through the payment of council tax.

Mr. Baldry: My Department does not collect statistics on household composition and has made no such estimates.

Inner-city Programmes

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures his Department has taken since 1992 to bring together resources for targeted inner-city programmes into a single budget.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend announced to the House on 4 November 1993, Official Report, columns 515-25, details of the single regeneration budget which will bring together 20 inner-city and other programmes for regeneration and development from April 1994. On 10 November 1993 he launched English Partnerships, a new public body under the chairmanship of Lord Walker, which will unify three initiatives which benefit urban and other areas: English Estates, city grant and derelict land grant. The resources for English Partnerships will form part of the single regeneration budget. The budget will be worth some £1·4 billion in 1994-95. Details of the single regeneration budget and English Partnerships have been placed in the Library of the House.

Local Authority Housing (Wandsworth)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish details of how local authority housing in Wandsworth was disposed of other than through the right-to-buy in the last 10 years.

Sir George Young [holding answer 16 February 1994]: Wandsworth council has reported to us the following disposals of council dwellings since 1983-84:

	Built for sale	Improved for sale	To sitting tenants (RTB)	Other	Total
1983-84	0	0	812	521	1,333
1984-85	128	16	1,065	591	1,800
1985-86	12	0	649	1,141	1,802
1986-87	7	0	724	703	1,434

	Built for sale	Improved for sale	To sitting tenants (RTB)	Other	Total
1987-88	2	0	1,334	635	1,971
1988-89	0	0	1,788	529	2,317
1989-90	9	0	1,625	628	2,262
1990-91	0	3	627	420	1,050
1991-92	0	0	517	323	840
1992-93	0	0	338	334	672

Local authority statistical returns on the sale of their housing do not enable us to provide an accurate breakdown of what is included in the "Other" category of disposals. More detailed information on such sales would have to be obtained from the local authority itself.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to extend the scope of legal aid to allow council tenants to gain an independent survey of the safety of their homes when the tenants find themselves in dispute with the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I will write to the hon. Gentleman about this matter shortly.

Arachnoiditis

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the effect of changes in legal aid provision on the ability of arachnoiditis sufferers with a history of treatment with Myodil to pursue claims for compensation against the manufacturers of the dye; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John M. Taylor: No separate assessment has been made of the effect of the legal aid eligibility changes on litigants pursuing claims against the manufacturers of Myodil. The financial eligibility of any applicant for legal aid depends on his or her income and the expenses which may be allowed against it. The financial limits for pesonal injury actions remain higher than those for other categories of civil proceedings.

Solicitors

Mr. French: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to introduce statutory regulation for solicitors.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Solicitors are regulated by the Solicitors Act 1974, the Administration of Justice Act 1985, and the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990. The Government have no plans to extend any of this legislation at the present time.

Mr. French: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many complaints his Department has received concerning the solicitors complaints bureau; and if he will make a statement about its future.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The figures are not centrally available, and could be acquired only at a disproportionate cost. The Law Society has the statutory powers to deal with complaints about solicitors, and in 1986 it delegated its powers in this respect to the solicitors complaints bureau. The future of the bureau is therefore for the Law Society to consider.

Law Society

Mr. French: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many complaints he received each year about the Law Society's regulatory function.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The figures are not centrally available, and could be acquired only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. French: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his assessment of the effectiveness of the self-regulatory system for solicitors.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Self-regulation is the most effective way of maintaining standards in professional life in general. It is particularly important that citizens with disputes, against other citizens, institutions or the state, have access to a completely independent legal profession. The Government are thus committed to the principle that in the first instance the maintenance of professional standards among solicitors should be the responsibility of the Law Society. To reinforce public confidence, the Government have also established the Office of the Legal Services Ombudsman, to provide independent scrutiny of the way the Law Society carries out its duties, and who may advise on the effectiveness of its complaints-handling procedures. His 1993 annual report contains a summary of recommendations.

Debt Repayments

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many applications a debtor may make to pay a debt by instalments following a county court judgment ordinary payment.

Mr. John M. Taylor: A debtor may make as many applications for an instalment order as he wishes unless he is debarred—disqualified—from doing so by the court.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proposals he has to amend the law relating to county court judgments, small claims and debt and the number of applications a debtor may make to pay debts by instalment.

Mr. John M. Taylor: There are currently no proposals to change the law in respect of any of the areas mentioned. A package of major changes to county court procedures was introduced in July 1991 and amendments to the small claims procedure came into effect in October 1992. Following evaluation of the 1991 changes and subject to public consultation, some minor amendments to debt recovery procedures are planned for later this year.

TRANSPORT

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures are proposed to protect people who live alongside existing railway lines to the channel tunnel from the effects of additional noise arising from international freight trains.

Mr. Freeman: As well as taking steps to reduce the effects of the international freight trains by the introduction of new locomotives and rolling stock, and continuously welded rail, British Rail has agreed jointly funded schemes with Kent and Surrey county councils and the London borough of Bromley for the provision of acoustic barriers alongside existing tracks at locations expected to be most affected at night. Kent county council has decided also to offer double glazing for certain isolated properties which cannot be protected by noise barriers.

Supplementary credit approvals have previously been allocated to Surrey and Kent. I have now agreed to provide further credit approvals of £375,000 to Kent, to cover the balance of their costs, and £336,000 to the London borough of Bromley.

I and my colleagues will be prepared to consider TPP applications for resources in 1995-96 from other authorities in London which agree appropriate schemes with BR. Such applications will be considered on their merits and in the light of the resources available.

Vehicle Registration Offices

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by date and place all internal management meetings held by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency to discuss the vehicle registration office review.

Mr. Key: On 12 January, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport and I met departmental officials, including the chief executive, to discuss enforcement issues.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy on the future of the Wales European centre at Brussels; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: The Wales European centre is supported by a consortium of public bodies in Wales. I have no present plans to change it.

Speech Therapy

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many students are currently training in Wales for speech therapy qualifications; and how many of these are Welsh speaking.

Sir Wyn Roberts: There were 76 students in further and higher education establishments in Wales including the University of Wales, whose subject of study was speech therapy, for the academic year 1992-93.

The number of these students who speak Welsh is not recorded.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy regarding out of town retail stores being established on green field sites; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Government policy on retail development is set out in planning policy guidance note 6, "Town Centres and Retail Developments". Local planning authorities shall determine applications for retail development and, where feasible, propose sites in their local plans taking into account the needs of the community, the likely effect of any development on the vitality and viability of existing town centres and whether access provides a choice of transport modes.

Cardiff Bay Development Corporation

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to receive the comments of the Cardiff Bay development corporation on his Department's quinquennial review into the corporation's financial and management policy.

Mr. Redwood: The board of the corporation considered the draft report on 4 February.

I am accordingly placing a copy of the report's conclusions and recommendations in the Library of the House today.

Arts Council for Wales

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will announce the chairman of the Arts Council of Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I am pleased to announce that my right hon. Friend has appointed Sir Richard Lloyd Jones as chairman designate of the new Arts Council of Wales from 1 April 1994.

Sir Richard has held a wide range of posts in the civil service, culminating as permanent secretary at the Welsh Office between 1985 and 1993. He has a strong personal interest in the arts and will provide a sound leadership for the council.

I also pay tribute to the current chairman of the Welsh Arts Council, Mr. Mathew Prichard CBE, who is retiring on 31 March 1994. Mr. Prichard has held that office since 1 April 1986 and has made a valuable contribution to the arts in Wales. I am grateful to him for his sterling work.

I intend to announce the rest of the membership of the Arts Council of Wales shortly.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Contracting Out (Pension Rights)

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what guidance he has issued about the effect of the Employment Protection (Consolidation) Act 1978 and the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 on the transfer of pension rights in services in his Department which are subject to contracting out.

Mr. Waldegrave: Guidance on the assessment of pensions arrangements offered by external bidders during the conduct of a market test is set out in paragraph 5.18 of "The Government's Guide to Market Testing", which was published in August 1993. Copies were placed in the Library of the House.

Consultants

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster on which occasion since 1979 his Department has employed the services of external consultants; and if he will give details of the purposes for which they were employed and the cost of employing them.

Mr. Waldegrave: The information is not held centrally in the form requested and is available only at disproportionate cost.

Civil Service (Fast Stream Entry)

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether the review of the civil service fast stream entry recommended by the career management and succession planning study is yet under way.

Mr. Waldegrave: A review of the civil service fast stream entry is now under way as recommended by the "Career Management and Succession Planning Study"—the Oughton report. The review team has been asked to report by the end of June 1994.

The team will consider whether the fast stream entry should continue and, if so, whether the arrangements need to be revised to ensure that sufficient people with the right qualifications and aptitudes are attracted to the civil service, and how far these arrangements need to be adapted to reflect the more explicit criteria being developed for the senior open structure—the top three grades in the civil service.

Recruitment and Assessment Services Agency

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster whether he has begun his review of the Recruitment and Assessment Services Agency.

Mr. Waldegrave: A review of the agency status of Recruitment and Assessment Services—RAS—is now under way. As a next steps agency the performance of RAS will be evaluated and RAS activities will be subjected to the normal prior options tests set out in the 1993 "Next Steps Review"—Cm 2430.

This work will take into account the further review of the civil service fast stream entry which has been set up following the Oughton report, "Career Management and Succession Planning Study" and on which I am announcing progress today. In addition, the review team will consider the appropriate relationships between the civil service recruitment services, the role of the civil service commissioners, and the recruitment responsibilities of Government Departments.

Comments and contributions from those with an interest in RAS and its work would be welcome and should be sent by 25 March 1994 to David Clark, recruitment studies team, Cabinet Office, Office of Public Service and Science, room 69A/2, Horse Guards road, London, SW1P 3AL.

Science (Postgraduate Training)

Mr. Trend: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress is being made on implementing the policies for postgraduate training announced in the White Paper "Realising our Potential: A Strategy for Science, Engineering and Technology".

Mr. Waldegrave: The Office of Science and Technology, with the help of the research and funding councils, has prepared a consultation document seeking views on how best to implement the White Paper's policy that research students supported by the research councils should normally complete a Master's year. The document is being circulated to higher education institutions, companies, professional and learned bodies, and I have placed copies in the Library. Consultation will last until the end of April.

PRIME MINISTER

Data Protection Registrar

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Prime Minister who is to be the new Data Protection Registrar.

The Prime Minister: I am pleased to announce that Her Majesty the Queen has approved the appointment of Mrs. Elizabeth France as the new Data Protection Registrar, on the retirement of Mr. Eric Howe later this year.

Mrs. France is currently head of information systems and pay services division of the Home Office. She is expected to take up her duties as registrar in the summer.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Northern Gas

Mr. Rendel: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many complaints were (a) lodged and (b) substantiated against Northern Gas in each year since 1983.

Mr. Eggar: The number of complaints lodged against British Gas Northern is a matter for the Director General of Gas Supply.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which body is responsible for investigating complaints against Northern Gas.

Mr. Eggar: Responsibility for investigating complaints against British Gas Northern lies with the Office of Gas Supply.

Regional Innovation Grants

Mr. Rendel: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures his Department has taken since 1992 to make inner-city task force and city challenge areas eligible for regional innovation grants.

Mr. Sainsbury: From 18 May 1992, regional innovation grants have been available in all inner-city task force and city challenge areas. It is a discretionary grant and all applicants must satisfy the criteria of the scheme to be eligible for support.

Malaysia (Exports)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the value of British exports to Malaysia in each year since 1987.

Mr. Needham: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Leeds, East (Mr. Mudie) on 31 January, Official Report, column 588.

Stolen Equipment

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a list of the equipment stolen from his Department in the last three years for which information is available; and what was the approximate value of each item.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 16 February 1994]: Details of equipment stolen from the Department during the three financial years in question are:

EDUCATION

Student Grants

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received from students over the age of 50 years about the difficulty in acquiring grants.

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend has received no representations on this subject. The same conditions of eligibility for mandatory awards apply to students of all ages.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to increase the amount of money available for grants.

Mr. Boswell: I refer to the answer which I gave to the hon. Member for Moray (Mrs. Ewing) on 18 January, Official Report, column 542. Decisions for years after 1994-95 will be taken at the appropriate time.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make it his policy to increase student grants annually in line with inflation.

Mr. Boswell: Support for students is provided through grants and loans. As my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer told the House on 30 November, Official Report, column 929, the total support available to students through the main rates of grant and loan will be increased by 4 per cent. in 1994-95. Within this total, the main grant rates will be reduced by around 10 per cent. a year from 1994-95 to 1996-97, and corresponding increases made in the loan facility. The total support available in subsequent years will be for decision at the appropriate time.

Student Loans

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations he has received from students in Coventry about the hardships caused by the student loans scheme.

Mr. Boswell: In the last year I have received one representation about the level of the student grant forwarded from an hon. Member for a Coventry constituency. Information about other representations received in the last year could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Inter-city Schools

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what measures his Department has taken since 1992 to ensure that more schools in the inner cities have the opportunity to develop their technological expertise;

(2) what measures his Department has taken since 1992 to seek opportunities to open new city technology colleges in deprived inner-city areas.

Mr. Robin Squire: In 1992-93 and 1993-94, 70 secondary schools in inner London and metropolitan authority areas have received technology schools initiative awards, enabling them to enhance their technology facilities. Self-governing and voluntary-aided secondary schools, including those in inner cities, are eligible to become technology colleges, which will have the backing of private sponsors and receive Government grants to develop their teaching of technology, science and mathematics.

One city technology college has opened since 1992, the John Cabot CTC in Bristol, bringing the total to 15. No further CTCs are planned, but sponsors are welcome to come forward with new proposals.

The Department continues to provide substantial financial support for the use of information technology in schools, both in inner cities and elsewhere. Most recently we announced a £4·5 million scheme to equip some primary schools with CD-ROM equipment and software, with funding allocated to take account of the needs of urban areas.

Student Unions

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to safeguard the funding by student unions of student newspapers in his proposals for the reform of student unions.

Mr. Boswell: The Government are determined to reform student unions and to secure choice, democracy and accountability in their activities. It is not our intention to jeopardise student services, for which funding will remain available in institutions' budgets.

London Education Budget

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much money has been made available for spending on primary and secondary education in each of the London boroughs in each of the last three financial years; what is the figure for 1994-95; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: For the purpose of determining standard spending assessments, the education component of standard spending, net of specific grants, is divided into five sub-blocks—under fives, five to 10, 11 to 15, 16 plus, and other education. The table sets out the year-on-year changes in the level of five to 10, 11 to 15 and 16 plus sub-blocks within the education standard spending assessment for London boroughs over the last three financial years, together with the figure for 1994-95. Education standard spending assessments are not ear-marked for local authority spending on primary and secondary education, as each authority is free to determine its spending priorities between and within services.

Notes:
1. 1993-94 figures for the 16+ sub-block reflects the LEAs' loss of responsibility for most further education.
2. 1994-95 figures reflect LEAs loss of responsibility for the careers service and school inspections.

Further Education Funding Council

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education who made the decision to appoint Mr. Philip Head as property controller for the Further Education Funding Council.

Mr. Boswell: Short-listed candidates for the post of the Further Education Funding Council's head of property services were interviewed by a panel chaired by Mr. Roger McClure, the council's director of finance and the senior line manager with overall responsibility for the property services team. Subsequent discussions leading to the offer of appointment to the post were conducted by Mr. McClure.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education on what criteria the approval of the Secretary of State was given to the appointment of Mr. Philip Head as property controller for the Further Education Funding Council.

Mr. Boswell: The Secretary of State's approval is not required for the appointment of staff of the Further Education Funding Council below the level of chief executive.

Environmental Education

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to implement the recommendations for environmental education in further education contained in the report of the Toyne committee.

Mr. Boswell: It is primarily for the further education institutions and the Further Education Funding Council to decide how to respond to the recommendations of the Toyne committee report, "Environmental Responsibility: an Agenda for Further and Higher Education". The Department wrote to the funding council and further education institutions drawing their attention to the committee's recommendations.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of claimants of incapacity benefit who will be eligible for income support for the period (a) between the 28th and 52nd week of incapacity and (b) from the end of the first year; and what are the estimated savings in each case.

Mr. Scott: We estimate that around 25 per cent. of people awarded incapacity benefit after April 1995 will also be entitled to income support between the 28th and 52nd weeks of incapacity; and that around 30 per cent. will be entitled to income support after 52 weeks. We estimate that the introduction of the higher rate of short-term incapacity benefit between the 28th and 52nd weeks of incapacity will produce net savings of around £110 million in 1995-96, and around £150 milliion in 1996-97; and that the introduction of long-term incapacity benefit after 52 weeks will produce net savings of around £20 million in 1995-96, and around £170 million in 1996-97.

Notes:
i. All estimates are expressed in constant 1993-94 prices, rounded to the nearest £10 million, and net of offsetting changes in income-related benefit expenditure.
ii. Estimates take account of the effect on incapacity benefit recipients of the planned changes in the qualifying conditions for the disability premium paid with the income-related benefit.

Pensioners Living Abroad

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost to the Exchequer if the pensions payable to British citizens now living abroad were indexed for the cost of living in the same way as if these people had remained living in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Hague: The estimated additional cost of paying fully indexed benefits to all state retirement and widow pensioners living abroad is £275 million a year. Separate figures are not available on the cost of indexing benefits only for those who are British citizens.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in which areas in the United Kingdom cold weather payments have been triggered since the start of the present severe weather in February; and if he will relax the regulations in order that such payments can now be made to all those eligible.

Mr. Scott: Payments have been triggered for the area covered by the Wilsden weather station for 10 to 16 February; and by the Meterological Office forecast for the area covered by Eskdalemuir, for the period 16 to 22 February.

All those eligible already receive automatic payments.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of people in receipt of invalidity benefit in Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney, and in Wales, in (a) 1979, (b) 1983, (c) 1987 and (d) 1992.

Mr. Scott: This is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Ted Rowlands, dated 17 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the number of people in receipt of Invalidity Benefit in Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney, and in Wales, in 1979, 1983, 1987 and 1992.

The information is not available in the exact format requested. This is because statistics for the years in question are only available for the standard statistical regions of the Benefits Agency, one of which is Wales, but are not broken down into individual Districts.

The areas of Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney are dealt with by the Agency's Merthyr Tydfil District. This District deals with areas other than Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney and so the statistics provided will include people not living in the area in question. Also statistics are not retained by Districts for longer than two years; I have therefore only provided figures for March 1992.

There were a total of 11,946 people claiming Invalidity Benefit in the Merthyr Tydfil District at the last working day of March 1992. The figures were obtained from a 100 per cent. clerical count of cases in the Office, and include a small number of people who have claimed but are not receiving Invalidity Benefit, eg. because there is underlying entitlement which has been extinguished by the payment of a higher overlapping benefit. The table shows the number of customers in receipt of Invalidity Benefit in Wales at a point in time in 1979, 1983, 1987 and 1992. The statistics are based on a 1 per cent. sample of claimants.

Number of IVB beneficiaries at a point in time in Wales

	Number
2 June 1979	69,000
2 April 1983	87,000
4 April 1987	122,000
4 April 1992	159,000

Note: The table figures are rounded to the nearest thousand.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many recipients currently in receipt of invalidity benefit are over the age of 58 years in (a) Merthyr Tydfil, (b) Rhymney and (c) Wales.

Mr. Scott: This is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. Ted Rowlands, dated 17 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary question about recipients of Invalidity Benefit who are over the age of 58 in Merthyr Tydfil, Rhymney and Wales.

The information is not available in the exact format requested. This is because statistics are only available for the standard statistical regions, one of which is Wales, but are not broken down into individual Districts.

The latest available information for Wales is based on a 1 per cent. sample of claims to Invalidity Benefit in Great Britain. At 4 April 1992, there were approximately 69,000 Invalidity Benefit recipients aged 59 and over in Wales.

Statistics for the specific areas of Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney are not readily available and could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost. This is because statistics are maintained by Benefits Agency Districts whose boundaries do not correspond with those of constituencies; and the statistics are not kept by age. To obtain the information you request would require a manual inspection of each individual claim within the Merthyr Tydfil District which covers Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Child Support Agency

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average length of time for the Child Support Agency to (a) acknowledge a letter from a member of the public, (b) answer any questions raised and reply in writing, and what is the current amount of correspondence awaiting (c) an acknowledgement and (d) a full reply; and what is the overall backlog of correspondence at the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Kevin McNamara, dated 17 February 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the time taken by the Child Support Agency to reply to letters from members of the public.

The Agency's Charter contains a stated aim to respond to correspondence within 10 working days of receipt. Although general correspondence is not routinely acknowledged, the Agency does aim to acknowledge written complaints within two days of receipt. Because the Agency is a new organisation providing a completely new service, it will not be possible to state with confidence before the end of the first year the average length of time taken to reply to correspondence.

As the first year of the Agency's operations has stimulated a great deal of correspondence, I am afraid that the targets for answering correspondence are not currently being met. The necessary steps are being taken to ensure that letters are answered as promptly as possible. The Agency remains committed, however, to publish its performance against Charter standards in April, and thereafter monthly.

I hope that you find this reply useful.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the total salary costs for the Child Support Agency for the current year broken down by grade.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mrs. Llin Golding, dated 18 February 1994:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking for details about the salary costs of staff in the Child Support Agency.

The forecast total salary costs for the Agency for the current year are £74 million.

Staffing costs by grade are not currently available.

I hope you find this information useful.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how long on average it takes the Child Support Agency to carry out the whole maintenance application process, broken down by area CSAC.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is the responsibility of its chief executive, Ros Hepplewhite. She will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mr. Donald Dewar, dated 18 February 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the time taken to complete the maintenance application process by each regional centre of the Child Support Agency.

For the period from the 5 April to 31 December 1993, information is available on the percentage of cases cleared by individual Agency Centres within given time bands; under 40 days, between 40 and 100 days, and over 100 days. This data is tabulated at Annex A.

I hope you find this reply useful.

CSAC	<40 Days	>40 Days but <100 Days	>100 Days
	Per cent.	Per cent.	Per cent.
Belfast	52·11	8·20	39·70
Birkenhead	41·20	15·80	43·00
Dudley	45·02	12·96	42·02
Falkirk	46·30	11·86	41·83
Hastings	45·64	11·77	42·59
Plymouth	42·82	11·85	45·32
TOTAL	45·51	12·14	42·34

The times are measured from the receipt of the maintenance application form by the Agency, to the day after the assessment is completed.

All data is from the Child Support Computer System, and is provisional.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the Child Support Agency's staff are on performance-related pay.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Ros Hepplewhite, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ros Hepplewhite to Mrs. Llin Golding, dated 18 February 1994:

I have been asked to reply to your Question to the Secretary of State about the number of staff in the Child Support Agency who receive performance related pay.

The Agency operates its performance related pay scheme within the terms of the new national pay arrangements agreed by the Treasury and the Civil Service Trade Unions. These new arrangements have created a stronger link between pay and performance by replacing automatic annual increments with performance related progression. The level of any individual's performance related progression is governed by the Agency's personal review system.

In this system, each individual is set a number of challenging work and personal objectives, tailored to meet each person's experience and ability. Performance related pay is awarded in recognition of the level of individual performance achieved over the previous twelve months.

The Agency now employs 4,937 staff all of whom are eligible for consideration for an award of performance related pay based upon the agreed arrangements which are available for inspection in the Library.

I hope you will find this reply helpful.

EMPLOYMENT

North Norfolk Action

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many persons were employed in North Norfolk Action after six months of operation.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: One hundred and twenty-five people have participated in the North Norfolk Action work experience scheme during its first six months of operation. At the end of that period there were 60 participants.

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many persons had moved into regular employment following participation in North Norfolk Action.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: In its first six months of operation, 16 people have gone directly into work from the North Norfolk Action work experience scheme.

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what evaluation has been made of the first six months of North Norfolk Action.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Evaluation of the North Norfolk Action scheme is currently under way. Results are expected in the summer.

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many persons had ceased to claim benefit immediately following interview for North Norfolk Action.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A variety of opportunities are offered at Restart interviews in Cromer and North Walsham jobcentres. Since May 1993 North Norfolk Action has been one of them. By mid-February 1994 a total of 82 people had signed off after their restart interview without giving a reason.

Channel Tunnel (Accidents)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when his Department was first notified of an incident which occurred in the channel tunnel in January in which two channel tunnel workers were taken to hospital for treatment after a bolt of electricity arced across from the main cable; what is the standard procedure for notifying his Department of accidents in the channel tunnel; if he will publish a table giving a full list of accidents in or around the channel tunnel notified to his Department, including dates, nature and injuries sustained; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Health and Safety Executive was notified of this incident on 18 January. It notified the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority on 19 January.

The Reporting of Injuries, Diseases, and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 apply to the United Kingdom side of the channel tunnel, and reportable accidents and dangerous occurrences must be notified to HSE. HSE informs the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority immediately of any fatal accidents or incidents with potential for major consequences. HSE also reports regularly to the Channel Tunnel Safety Authority other accident information to assist accident prevention on the French side of the project.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment who is the commissioner for the rights of trade union members.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The commissioner for the rights of trade union members is Mrs. Gill Rowlands. I have arranged for the hon. Member to receive a personal copy of her latest annual report.

Job Interview Guarantee Scheme

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the current criteria for eligibility for the job interview guarantee scheme; and by what percentage the number of eligible persons has increased since 1992.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. David Rendel, dated 18 February 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the Job Interview Guarantee Scheme.

The current criteria for eligibility for the Job Interview Guarantee (JIG) scheme were introduced by the Employment Department in April 1993 as part of an overall review of eligibility for all the Group's programmes. The aim of the review was to streamline and bring together the criteria which had been developed over time for individual programmes.

The following are entitled to help through the JIG:—

—people aged 18+ who are unemployed for six months or more and in receipt of unemployment benefit, Income Support, Invalidity Benefit, Severe Disablement Allowance, Sickness Benefit or National Insurance credits.
—people with disabilities.
—indirect benefit recipients—the partner of a person who is unemployed and claiming unemployment benefit or Income Support where both partners are unemployed for 26 weeks or more.
—ex-prisoners.
—ex-regulars.
—people involved in designated large scale redundancies.
—people living in areas where a colliery has closed.
—people with literacy and numeracy needs.
—people needing basic training in English.
—people returning to the labour market after being away for a continuous period of two years or more and who have not received unemployment benefit or National Insurance credits through the Employment Service.

The number of clients unemployed and in receipt of benefits or National Insurance credits for six months or more in Great Britain and therefore eligible for JIG, as well as other programmes and initiatives, are as follows:

Year	Number
1992	1,269,000
1993	1,548,000
1994	1,545,000

These long-term unemployed people make up our main target group, although they may also fall into one or more of the other categories. We do not have specific information on numbers of clients within each of these other categories.

JIG continues to be an effective way of helping our priority clients out of unemployment and back to work. Through it we expect to place around 160,000 people into jobs in 1993/94, more than ever before.

I hope this is helpful.

Social Policy

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 2 February, Official Report, column 725, in what form he will respond to the EU's Green Paper on social policy before 31 March.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State will be sending a paper to the Commissioner for Social Affairs setting out the Government's views.

Health and Safety (Children)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the adequacy of health and safety protection for school-age children while engaged in employment.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am satisified that the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 and its relevant statutory provisions ensures that employers offer adequate protection for all those engaged in work activities including school-age children. Local byelaws further regulate their employment.

The provisions of HSWA were extended by the Health and Safety (Training for Employment) Regulations 1990 to ensure that pupils taking part in work experience were fully protected.

Mrs. Clywd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what discussions he has had with (a) the Child Accident Prevention Trust and (b) other agencies concerning the incidence of accidents involving school-age children at work.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None, but officials of the Health and Safety Executive are represented on the council of the Child Accident Prevention Trust and have good contacts with a number of other relevant safety agencies.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the information available on the number of accidents involving children at work.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 require employers and others to report to the Health and Safety Executive or to local authorities all accidents which involve employees and makes no exception for employees of school age. All fatalities at work become known to HSE either through accident reports, or through a coroner's office.

HSE has no evidence to suggest that employers vary their approach to reporting according to the age of their employees.

Foyer Concept

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what pilot projects have been carried out since 1992 of the foyer concept, whereby young people are given a place in a hostel if in exchange they give a commitment to train and look for work.

Miss Widdecombe: The Department is supporting five pilot foyers based in YMCA hostels in Nottingham, Norwich, St. Helens, Wimbledon and Romford. The pilots are being evaluated, with results expected later this year.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which body is responsible for investigating complaints against the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The independent Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration—the ombudsman—will investigate any complaints referred to him against the Health and Safety Executive—HSE—by Members of Parliament on behalf of their constituents. Further details are published in the Health and Safety Executive's citizens charter leaflets.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many complaints were (a) lodged and (b) substantiated against the Health and Safety Executive in each year since 1983.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Complaints lodged with the ombudsman and substantiated against the Health and Safety Executive since 1983 are as follows:

	Lodged	Partially upheld	Upheld
1983	1	1	—
1984	—	—	—

HOME DEPARTMENT

Mr. Rehman Suleman Ekhalwaya

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects his Department's inquiries into the application by Mr. Rehman Suleman Ekhalwaya—Ref: 29/12/128—to join his wife in the United Kingdom, and referred by the high commission in Bombay will be complete; when he expects a recommendation to be passed to Bombay; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Mr. Ekhalway's fiancee will be invited for interview in March. A report of that interview will be sent to the entry clearance officer in Bombay for consideration.

European Parliament

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list those member states of the European Union whose armed forces will be qualified to stand as candidates for United Kingdom seats for the European Parliament;

(2) which European Union member states' civil servants will be qualified to stand as candidates for United Kingdom seats in the European Parliament.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not readily available and I will write to the hon. Member.

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which Ministers, and on what occasion and for what reasons, have signed public interest immunity certificates since 1979.

Mr. Howard: The information requested is not held centrally.

Deportation (Use of Gags)

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library his previous and present guidelines for the use of gags in deportation cases (a) on board aircraft and (b) on the mainland of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: There are no such guidelines, but the recent joint Home Office/police review of removal procedures concluded that the use of mouth restraints—which had been suspended in August 1993—should not be resumed. My right hon. and learned Friend indicated in reply to a question from my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Burton (Sir I. Lawrence) on 12 January at columns 212-13 that he accepted that conclusion. A copy of the report of the joint review has already been placed in the Library of the House.

Vandalism

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many instances of vandalism his Department estimates have occurred in each year between 1983 and 1993 as a result of drilling ventilation holes through the front doors of council homes in the north-east for the purposes of ensuring adequate combustion in natural gas fires.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested in not collected centrally.

Safer Cities Scheme

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what date he expects the safer cities scheme to cover 40 urban areas.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Ten new projects were announced on 29 December 1993 and announcements on further projects are planned for 1994-95. As funding for the programme is to be included in the single regeneration budget—to be administered by the Department of the Environment—from 1 April 1994, the precise timetable for later projects will be drawn up in conjunction with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Sexual Offences (Anonymity)

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what conclusions he has reached of his examination of the criminal law on anonymity in sexual offence cases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I have given careful consideration to this matter in the light of considerable public concern that was apparent towards the end of last year. I am satisfied, however, that the present law, which affords anonymity for complainants in sexual offence cases but offers no special protection for defendants, strikes a proper balance between the principle of open justice on the one hand and the need to ensure that victims of sexual offences are encouraged to come forward on the other. I therefore have no plans to alter the law in this area.

I believe that victims must continue to benefit from the current level of protection. Even with anonymity, criminal trial is a particularly harrowing process for the victim of a sexual offence and I believe that any diminution in the protection currently available, or doubts about the certainty of the protection, would be likely to increase the number of sexual offences that go unreported and unpunished. The law already allows for the prosecution of complainants whose accusations amount to perjury or an attempt to pervert the course of justice, and in those circumstances the rules relating to anonymity no longer apply.

So far as defendants in sexual offences cases are concerned, I am not persuaded that they should be treated differently from those charged with other serious crimes, who may also fear a loss of reputation. In a system of open justice some discomfort for defendants who are subsequently acquitted is inevitable. But openness is essential to the maintenance of public confidence in the criminal justice system and ensures that information that might encourage further witnesses to come forward is publicly available. I do not consider that there is a special case for infringing that principle in relation to defendants in sexual offences cases, as a matter either of general application or of judicial discretion in the individual case.

Voluntary Services Unit

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the national organisations dealing exclusively or primarily with women that are funded by the Voluntary Services Unit;

(2) if he will list the umbrella organisations dealing exclusively or primarily with women that are funded by the Voluntary Services Unit;

(3) if he will list the Merseyside organisations dealing exclusively or primarily with women that are funded by the Voluntary Services Unit.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Voluntary Services Unit does not fund any organisation which deals exclusively or primarily with women.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxation

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the effect on the economy of the tax increases scheduled during April 1994.

Mr. Dorrell: The 1994-95 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" takes full account of these measures, and sets out the Government's latest economic forecast. The tax increases and public expenditure savings announced in the two 1993 Budgets put the public finances on a sound footing, and they help create the conditions for sustainable economic growth combined with low inflation.

Inland Revenue (Shipley)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what arrangements are being made to exclude the tax affairs of the royal family and hon. Members, currently administered by the Inland Revenue at Shipley in west Yorkshire, from being administered by a third party under the market-testing arrangements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: No such arrangements are necessary. If activities involving the processing, handling or holding of tax information at Shipley or elsewhere, were to be transferred to a private sector organisation, the Inland Revenue would remain responsible for continuing to ensure proper standards of privacy and confidentiality for all citizens including the royal family and hon. Members. In addition to contractual safeguards, the contracting organisation and its employees would be subject, in the same way as Inland Revenue employees, to the criminal sanctions—a fine or imprisonment or both—provided by section 182 of the Finance Act 1989 for unauthorised disclosure of taxpayer personal information.

Confidentiality is not a bar to market testing; a lot of highly sensitive Government work is done by the private sector. But the Inland Revenue would need to be sure that an outside contractor could replicate existing security procedures and conditions.

Priests (Income Tax)

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Roman Catholic priests in Northern Ireland pay income tax; and how many are exempt.

Mr. Dorrell: I regret that this information is not available. There are no special exemptions from income tax for Roman Catholic priests.

Carbon Savings

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, what estimates had originally been made in March 1993 of the likely carbon savings in the year 2000 from the imposition of value added tax on domestic fuel; and what revision has been made to this estimate following the announcement by the Chancellor in December of compensatory packages regarding the imposition of value added tax on domestic fuel.

Sir John Cope: At the time of the Budget speech in March 1993 it was estimated that imposing VAT on domestic fuel and power should reduce carbon dioxide emissions by around 1.5 million tonnes of carbon by the end of the century. It is not expected that the compensation package would substantially affect the original broad estimate.

Car Phones

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made as to the effect of the imposition of tax on car phones supplied by employers on the safety of motorists.

Mr. Dorrell: I am not aware of any evidence which suggests that the introduction in 1991 of the standard tax charge of £200 for the private use of mobile telephones provided by employers to their employees has affected the safety of motorists.

Income Tax

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people paid income tax for each year since 1978-79 (a) in total and (b) as a percentage of the economically active adult population of working age; and what are the estimated figures for the next three years.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 16 February 1994]: The information is given in the table.

Year	Individuals paying tax[1] (a) Thousands	Civilian labour force population of working age (b) Thousands	Taxpayers expressed as a percentage of the civilian labour force population of working age (a)/(b) Per cent.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 17 February 1994]: The most recent statement on the long-standing convention on the use of the marking "Not for NAO Eyes" is contained in a Treasury letter of 15 July 1988 which was agreed with NAO. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Members' Library.

Opinion Polls

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on recent public opinion poll findings about the way forward in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Ancram: Recent opinion polls have shown that there is a strong desire for peace following the signing of the joint declaration on 15 December. The opportunity for peace remains and is one that should be taken. In order for there to be long-term stability in Northern Ireland, there needs to be a comprehensive settlement embracing all the main relationships and so the Government will continue to progress the talks process with the main constitutional parties and the Irish Government on the basis of the statement of 26 March 1991.

Peace

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress there has been towards seeking a lasting peace since the Prime Minister's statement to the House on 15 December 1993, Official Report, columns 1071-93.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave my hon. Friends the Members for Colne Valley (Mr. Riddick) and for Billericay (Mrs. Gorman) and the hon. Member for Neath (Mr. Hain) on 17 February, Official Report, column 1051.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many invalidity benefit applications were (a) reviewed and (b) appealed during the period July to December 1993.

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

I hope you find this helpful.

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. Wylie to Mr. Clifford Forsythe, dated 17 February 1994:

As Chief Executive of the Social Security Agency, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question on the number of Disability Living Allowance applications reviewed and appealed.

During the period 1 July 1993 to 31 December 1993, 9,578 Disability Living Allowance applications were reviewed and 359 review decisions were appealed.

I hope you find this helpful.

Benefits (Debt Repayment)

Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons in receipt of benefit during the period July to December 1993 had direct deductions made for debt repayment.

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Total number of deductions from benefit at 31 December 1993

	Number
Northern Ireland electricity	12,364
Northern Ireland housing executive	15,020
Rates collection agency	1,171
Private landlord	18
Housing association	342
Estate agent	15
Building society	875
Others	89

I hope you find this information helpful.

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which Ministers, and on what occasion and for what reasons, have signed public interest immunity certificates since 1979.

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested is not held centrally.

Advertising

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all television advertising, newspaper advertising, radio advertising and other promotional campaigns with a budgeted cost in excess of £10,000 conducted by (a) his Office and (b) his agencies (1) in the current financial year and (ii) planned for 1994-95, showing for each the objectives and mechanisms for assessing the effectivness of the advertising.

Sir John Wheeler: The information has been placed in the Library.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Wilton Park Conferences

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what conferences his Department's Wilton Park conference agency is holding this year on nuclear proliferation issues; how hon. Members are kept informed of conferences held in the Wiston house centre: and if he will make a statement on the role and value of the Wilton Park conferences.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Responsibility for the first two parts of the question has been delegated to Wilton Park under its chief executive, Professor Richard Langhorne, who has on my instructions written to the hon. Member.

Through its series of international conferences in which senior politicars, officials, businessmen, academics and other professionals participate, Wilton Park aims to contribute to the solution of international problems.

Letter from R. T. B. Langhorne to Mr. Llew Smith, dated 15 February 1994:

I have been asked to reply to your question concerning Wilton Park.

As it happens, the conference most directly related to the subject of your interest is in progress at Wilton House this week.

I am therefore enclosing the programme and the list of participants for your information. There are other conferences in the 1994 list during which, although their titles are not directly related to the question of proliferation, the matter either has or will come up tangentially. The enclosed list of the year's topics will show you where this is likely to occur.

The Annual Report is laid before the House and it contains a detailed list of conferences held by Wilton Park. We have not in the past sent the list of forthcoming conferences to Members of Parliament, except to those MPs who sit on the Wilton Park Academic Council. I propose to ask the Council at its next meeting whether this should be done for next year and thereafter.

The conferences are designed above all to stimulate off-the-record discussion, and participants are encouraged not to be unduly diplomatic, but to express disagreement frankly. The aim is not so much to exchange information, or even opinions, as to influence attitudes. More and more Wilton Park acts as a forum for those involved in regional and other international conflicts, in such diverse places as Southern Africa, the Middle East and Eastern Europe, to explore their differences and seek through dialogue a better mutual understanding which could contribute to eventual resolution of conflicts.

Wilton Park conferences bring together people from many countries coming from diverse professional backgrounds and holding positions of responsibility in different fields of activity. The international and interprofessional composition of each conference guarantees that all learn much from each other.

Finally, I would make two very particular points about Wilton Park. It frequently brings together a mixture of participants from states who cannot sustain largescale foreign services of their own and provides a forum in which their politicians and officials can meet not only their opposite numbers from other states of all kinds, but also the officers of international organisations and their agencies. Secondly, at a time when there are acute new stresses on the foreign representation of the United Kingdom arising from the increased numbers of states and the rising number of acute crises in international affairs, Wilton Park is able to perform an increasingly significant role in bringing relevant people and information directly into the United Kingdom.

Sarajevo

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 15 February, Official Report, columns 708-10, if he will make it his policy that air strikes against the Bosnian Serbs will be delayed until the special representative of the Secretary-General of the United Nations, Yasushi Akashi, has reported on the findings of the investigative team on the massacre at Sarajevo market on 5 February; and what effect the findings of the team will have on his policy in respect of air strikes.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Nations team investigating the mortar attack on Sarajevo on 5 February has now published its report. It concludes that there is insufficient evidence to attribute the attack to either party. The decisions of the North Atlantic Council are designed not to punish, but to secure an end to the bombardment and siege of Sarajevo.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the Greek Government with regard to the NATO ultimatum concerned with the demilitarisation of Sarajevo and the possibility of air strikes.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No representations have been received from the Greek Government since their dissociation from the 9 February NATO decision.

European Parliament

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy that the necessary procedures in the United Kingdom to bring into effect the agreement reached at the Edinburgh Economic Council regarding the number of Members of the European Parliament will not be completed before the withdrawal by France of the demand that the new European Parliament building be built in Strasbourg.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No. A Council decision of 1 February 1993 calls for member states to complete the necessary procedures to bring into effect the agreement reached at the Edinburgh European Council increasing the number of MEPs in time for the elections in June this year.

The legislative procedures required to fulfil this obligation in the United Kingdom are expected to be completed shortly.

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which Ministers, and on what occasion and for what reasons, have signed public interest immunity certificates since 1979.

Mr. Goodlad: No central records have been kept of public interest immunity certificates signed by Foreign and Commonwealth Office Ministers. I regret that to compile a list of such certificates going back to 1979 would involve disproportionate cost.

Bosnia

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the likely implications for British-Russian and British-Greek relations of NATO air strikes against the Bosnian Serbs.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs discussed the question of NATO air strikes with Mr. Kozyrev, the Russian Foreign Minister, during his recent visit to Moscow with the Prime Minister. Mr. Kozyrev shares our underlying objective of lifting the siege and bringing the conflict to a peaceful end. My right hon. Friend made it clear that we understand Russian concerns about the need for consultation. We and our NATO allies will remain in close touch with them.

We regret Greece's decision to dissociate itself from the 9 February NATO decision. But NATO's determination to carry through that decision, and to help the UN put an end to the bombardment of Sarajevo, is clear.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what difference of view exists between the United Kingdom and (a) France and (b) the United States of America in interpreting the NATO ultimatum on Sarajevo; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The NATO decision of 9 February is clear—any heavy weapons remaining within 20 km of Sarajevo and not under UN control after midnight GMT on 20 February will be subject to air strikes. The United Kingdom, France and the United States, along with other NATO partners, are fully committed to carrying this decision through.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the definition of control in respect of heavy weaponry in the latest NATO ultimatum to warring factions in Bosnia-Herzegovina; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The NATO decision of 9 February requires all heavy weapons remaining within 20 km of Sarajevo after midnight on 20 February to be placed unde UNPROFOR control. It is for UNPROFOR commanders to determine the nature of that control.

Cyprus

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will request the United Nations Secretary-General to instigate an inquiry into the recent allegations made by the former United States ambassador to Turkey, Mr. Crawford, that Turkish Government officials knew of the whereabouts of a number of persons detained against their will who subsequently disappeared following the invasion of Cyprus by Turkish forces in 1974;

(2) if he will now consider suggesting an inquiry to be executed by the European Union's competent agencies into the fate of the Greek Cypriots missing since 1974;

(3) if he will request the Turkish Government to respond to the allegations made by the former United States ambassador to Turkey, Mr. Crawford, that the Turkish authorities had in their custody a number of persons subsequently classified as missing following the invasion of Cyrpus by Turkey in 1974;

(4) if he will request the present Turkish ambassador to the United Nations to give details of his personal knowledge of the whereabouts of the Greek Cypriots classified as missing persons since the invasion of Cyprus by Turkish forces in 1974;

(5) if he will investigate the recent claims of the former United States ambassador to Turkey, Mr. Crawford, that persons classified as missing since the 1974 invasion of Cyprus by Turkish troops, were alive and in Turkish custody.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Mr. Crawford was United States ambassador to Cyprus from 1974 to 1978. His remarks do not seem to constitute recent evidence about the fate of missing persons. We consider that the United Nations Committee on Missing Persons remains the best instrument for pursuing the question of those missing from both communities. The committee's effectiveness depends on full co-operation from both sides.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he raised the question of the missing Greek Cypriots during his recent visit to Turkey.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if Her Majesty's Government will ask the Turkish Government if they will allow the United Nations Committee on Missing Persons to carry out its inquiries (a) inside the occupied areas of Cyprus, without controls, and (b) inside Turkey;

(2) what appropriations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Turkish Government on co-operation with the United Nations special committee on the missing persons of Cyprus;

(3) what is the latest information in the possession of Her Majesty's Government concerning the whereabouts of the Greek Cypriot persons, classified as missing since 1974.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We consider that the United Nations Committee on Missing Persons remains the best instrument for pursuing the question of those missing from both communities. The committee's effectiveness depends on full co-operation from both sides. The United Nations has had cause to complain of the level of co-operation from both sides.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement outlining the present policy of Her Majesty's Government on the occupation of part of the island of Cyprus by Turkish armed forces.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We are committed to the search for a settlement to the Cyprus problem acceptable to both Cypriot communities. The United Nations Secretary-General's mission of good offices remains the best hope for a just and lasting solution. This should be based on a single, bi-communal, bi-zonal federal republic.

HEALTH

Nurses and Carers

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the ratio of trained nurses to carers working in (a) London and (b) England's national health service hospitals in (i) 1992 and (ii) 1993.

Mr. Sackville: The available information is shown in the table.

Qualified and unqualified nurses and midwives for England and London, September 1992 (whole time equivalents)

	Qualified nursing and midwifery staff	Unqualified nursing and midwifery staff	Ratio
England	246,570	90,850	1:0·4

Pre registration and Project 2000 nursing students have not been included within the figures. As they are in training, they cannot be classified as qualified or unqualified staff.

Private Patients' Income

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much income has been received from private patients' income, by district health authority, for each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: This information will be placed in the Library. Some district health authorities show a decline in private patient income for 1991-92 and 1992-93 because figures for national health service trusts are excluded.

Guy's Hospital

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the latest proposals for the future of Guy's hospital.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the statement my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave on 10 February at columns 458-61 about health services in London.

Salaries

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the highest salary paid for (a) a unit general manager and (b) a trust chief executive, including bonuses, in 1993.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 2 February at column 717.

Toxoplasmosis

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if the survey into toxoplasmosis in pregnancy will be a material factor in determining whether or not a United Kingdom wide screening programme for toxoplasmosis in pregnancy is to be undertaken;

(2) what are the terms of reference of the survey being undertaken by the public health laboratory service into toxoplasmosis in pregnancy; what is the extent of the survey; how many pregnant women are involved; how the service is funded; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: This survey began as a study of antenatal sera for the presence of antibodies to toxoplasmosis, but since 1992 has followed up the level of compliance with antenatal screening offered to pregnant women. The survey invites reports from other public health laboratories. The public health laboratory service is funded by the Department of Health.

Results from the survey will not alone determine whether a United Kingdom-wide screening programme for toxoplasmosis in pregnancy should be introduced, but they will help to provide some of the information required in assessing whether such a programme might be appropriate. Other factors are important and are subject to a reliable screening test being developed.

Down's Syndrome

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate has been made of the number of children suffering from Down's syndrome who require spectacles.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department produces no such estimates.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate has been made of the number of children suffering from Down's syndrome who have applied for a supplementary voucher for the fitting of specially made spectacle frames.

Dr. Mawhinney: Centrally collected information covers only the number and type of vouchers issued, not patient details such as age.

Sir James Ackers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the sum paid to Sir James Ackers, following his resignation as chairman of the West Midlands regional health authority, was subject to the deduction of tax.

Dr. Mawhinney: Payments under paragraph 9(3) of schedule 5 to the National Health Service Act 1977 are not liable to the deduction of tax.

Folic Acid

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how often the national health service and Health Education Authority monitor (a) the intake and (b) the knowledge of the need to take in folic acid before and during pregnancy.

Mr. Sackville: National average intakes of folic acid have been monitored routinely by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food as part of the national food survey since the late 1970s. In addition the 1986-87 Dietary and Nutritional Survey of British Adults provided detailed estimates of folic acid intakes by women based on records of actual food consumption. Copies of these surveys are available in the Library. Trends in folic intake for women are expected to be measured again in 1998 as part of the next national diet and nutrition survey covering adults.

The Health Education Authority, which has incorporated advice on folic acid and neural tube defects in its public and professional educational materials covering nutrition and pregnancy, regularly monitors the effectiveness of its publications.

Health Service, London

Mr. Forman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement giving details of the implications for south-west London hospital facilities, in particular the St. Helier NHS trust and its renal unit, of her statement to the House of 10 February, Official Report, columns 458-72, on the health service in London.

Dr. Mawhinney: As indicated in my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's statement, it will now be for those locally charged with assessing and meeting health needs to take into consideration the effects, over time, of proposed changes in central London and the views of those living in the area served, before deciding whether local service changes should be proposed for public consultation.

Prescriptions

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of prescription costs the national health service less than (i) £4·75 and (ii) £4·50.

Dr. Mawhinney: The latest available information is for 1992. In that year an estimated 53 per cent. of all prescribed items had a total cost to the national health service of less than £4·75; 51 per cent. cost less than £4·50.

GPs (Night Visits)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to require the model claim form for general practitioners night visit fees to be amended to show the time the patient requested care in addition to the time of the visit.

Dr. Mawhinney: No.

HIV

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many HIV family medical units there are in each region and nationally.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not held centrally. However, all regional health authorities have been asked to consider the special needs of families affected by HIV when carrying out their needs assessments for service developments.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the budget in real terms in each of the last five years for the treatment and investigation of HIV in babies.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not held centrally.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the rates of HIV in (a) babies and (b) pregnant women in each EC country.

Mr. Sackville: Figures for HIV infection are not kept by all European Union countries. However, the number of AIDS cases resulting from transmission of HIV from mother to baby are reported and up to 31 March 1993 the cumulative numbers are as follows:

Country	Number
Belgium	58
Denmark	10
France	345
Germany	66
Greece	7
Ireland	9
Italy	321
Luxembourg	0
Netherlands	11
Portugal	18
Spain	412
United Kingdom	83

Infertility

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what provision is made for infertility treatment in the Bristol and district health authority area.

Mr. Sackville: Bristol and district health authority purchases, for its resident population, a range of services for the investigation and treatment of sub-fertility. The outline of the services are:

United Bristol Health Care Trust:—
St. Michael's hospital:—
seven consultant-led sub-fertility clinics each week and five nurse-led clinics each week.
Southmead Health Services Trust:—
five consultant-led sub-fertility clinics each week and one nurse-led clinic each week.

A limited number of in-vitro fertilisation and gamete intra-fallopian transfer procedures are undertaken at Southmead hospital. Other follow up in-patient or day case work is undertaken as part of the general gynaecology service at both hospitals.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is Government policy on the provision of infertility treatment to be provided in the private health sector.

Mr. Sackville: District health authorities and general practitioner fundholders have the freedom to purchase services from any health authority, from national health service trusts or from the private sector. They are encouraged to seek provision of services from those who can best ensure that quality and value for money are achieved, irrespective of whether they are in the public or the private sector.

Dental Treatment

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will now publish the Government's response to the fundamental review of dental remuneration and the oral health strategy for England.

Dr. Mawhinney: Our proposals will be announced in due course.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental practitioners there are currently offering dental treatment on the NHS in England to new patients seeking to be registered with them for NHS dental purposes; and what was the corresponding figure in October 1990.

Dr. Mawhinney: Dentists are independent contractors and free to choose whether or not to accept any individual patient, or category of patients, for national health service treatment and to review their decisions at any time.

At 30 September 1993 there were 15,773 dentists, including principals, assistants and vocational trainees, in contract with family health services authorities. The corresponding number at 30 September 1990 was 15,480.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists in England have left the national health service since October 1990, but who are continuing to offer dental services on a private basis.

Dr. Mawhinney: Dentists are not required to disclose their intentions on termination of their contracts with family health services authorities.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dental patients have been removed from the NHS dentists' lists since the introduction of the dental contract in October 1990.

Dr. Mawhinney: During the period 1 October 1990 to 30 November 1993 there were 50·9 million registrations and 21·7 million deletions from the dental register. The number of patients registered at 30 November 1994 was therefore 29·2 million.

Pigs (Radiation)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies have been sponsored by her Department into radiation risks using live pigs.

Mr. Sackville: Currently the Department of Health does not sponsor any research into radiation risks using live pigs.

Psychiatric Patients

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the new guidance about the discharge of psychiatric patients from hospital will be sent to health and local authorities.

Mr. Bowis: The draft guidance was issued for consultation on 12 January with a request for comments by 25 February. We shall issue the substantive guidance when we have considered and taken account of the comments received.

Hyperlipidaemia

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes she plans to ensure that sufferers from hyperlipidaemia are entitled to free prescriptions on the same basis as diabetics.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Colostomy Bags

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what standard is set by her Department for colostomy bags; what work is being undertaken to improve the standard of such bags; and what consideration has been given to the need for an expiry date for their use.

Mr. Sackville: Colostomy bags should conform to British standard 7127, although some older products on the market will pre-date this standard. The Department contributed to the drafting of this standard, which was published in 1991. Discussions are proceeding with several independent testing laboratories, with the objective of increasing the number of facilities for compliance testing.

The standard stipulates that products which have a shelf life of less than five years shoud be labelled with the expiry date.

Youth Treatment Service

Mr. Pickles: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether she has yet reached a decision on the future siting of the youth treatment service; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: I have today informed the chief executive of the youth treatment service of my decision that the service should continue to operate from the existing two sites, Glenthorne in Birmingham and St. Charles at Brentwood, Essex, for at least the next four years.

I have told the chief executive that consideration will be given to capital expenditure to carry out necessary work at the two centres.

I hope that this decision will remove some of the obstacles to short-term planning which have faced the youth treatment service for so long as a result of the uncertainties surrounding the site issue.

Children's Rights

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children's organisations were consulted on the draft first report from the United Kingdom on implementation of the United Nations convention on the rights of the child; on what date consultation documents were posted; what was the deadline for receipt of comments by his Department; and how many of those organisations responded within his deadline.

Mr. Bowis: Consultation on reports of this kind is not normal practice, however, in the circumstances a short consultation exercise was undertaken. Of 65 organisations given the opportunity to comment on the draft report, some 35 were children's organisations. Copies of the report went out from 13 December and comments were requested by 31 December. Nine organisations responded before the deadline, but we did offer to extend this slightly.

London Hospitals

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) is she will publish the evidence upon which she based her decision that the St. Thomas's site offers a better location and environment than Guy's hospital;

(2) if she will place in the Library all the information which informed her decision to concentrate acute and specialist services at St. Thomas's hospital;

(3) what evidence she has that Guy's hospital is more efficient or cost-effective than St. Thomas's.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Guy's and St. Thomas's national health service trust has been asked to pursue proposals that will concentrate patient services, over time, at the St. Thomas's site. The decision to ask the trust to do so was based upon an assessment of its outline business case. The documentation forms management information and includes operational and financial detail about the trust's business which it would not be appropriate to release. All information necessary for statutory public consultation will be made available before a final decision is made on any significant service changes.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are employed within the public relations office of St. Thamas's hospital; and what is its annual budget for 1993-94.

Dr. Mawhinney: This is a matter for Guy's and St. Thomas's hospital trust. The hon. Member may wish to contact Lord Hayhoe, the chairman, for details.

Health Care Provision

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what replies she has received to the questions she posed to chairmen of purchasing health authorities concerning wide consultation and the provision of health care; and if she will list the replies she has received according to district.

Dr. Mawhinney: Replies have been received from all districts and these are currently being evaluated.

Independent Scientific Committee on Smoking and Health

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the membership of the former independent scientific committee on smoking and health.

Mr. Sackville: The terms of appointment of the members of the independent scientific committee on smoking and health expired at the end of 1991. In the light of the strategy for health then being developed, and the fact that some of the functions of the committee had been superseded by the adoption of European Community directives on tar yield of cigarettes and the labelling of tobacco products, it was decided to review the range of scientific advice required on smoking issues. As a result of that assessment, a new scientific committee on tobacco and health was announced on 7 February 1994.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the members of the scientific committee on tobacco and health, with their place of work and qualifications for appointment.

Mr. Sackville: Details of the scientific committee on smoking and health were announced on 7 February and the information is as follows:

Ivan Biddle

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will instruct that Ivan Biddle be re-employed by the national health service.

Dr. Mawhinney: No.

AIDS (Education)

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her assessment of the importance of the Health Education Authority's role in providing national public education campaigns to promote safer sex, with particular reference to the rate of heterosexual transmission of AIDS.

Mr. Sackville: The Health Education Authority has a key role in developing and promoting safer sex advice across the United Kingdom to any people whose behaviour may put them at greater risk of HIV infection. This is underpinned and complemented by contributions from many other local and national agencies, all delivering health education to the whole population.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether her Department has issued any guidelines to NHS trusts in relation to the appointment of senior financial management; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department of Health fully appreciates the importance to national health service trusts of appointing properly qualified people to senior finance posts. No guidance has been issued specifically to NHS trusts on this issue. However, in November 1992, the Department launched its new finance staff development strategy, which applies to district health authorities and NHS trusts alike. The key points of the strategy were summarised in the booklet "Framework for the Future". This made it clear that senior finance staff in the NHS would be expected to possess, or to be studying for, the appropriate professional qualifications, and to possess the skills and competencies necessary to discharge their duties, as well as displaying various personal qualities desirable in finance staff generally. In addition, the Department launched "The Role of the Director of Finance in the NHS" in February 1994. This provides guidance on the role of the director of finance, relationships with other key NHS officers, personal qualities, professional skills and the qualifications that he or she requires. Copies of the documents will be placed in the Library.

Family Practitioners (Fraud)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will outline the disciplinary procedures for dealing with accusations of fraud by family practitioners against the national health service; how many allegations have been made against family practitioners in each year since 1991 in (a) Coventry and (b) elsewhere; how many of these allegations in each category have proved to be true; and what action has been taken against them.

Dr. Mawhinney: Part II of the National Health Service Act 1977 and the National Health Service (Service Committees and Tribunal) Regulations 1992, as amended, set out the disciplinary powers available to family services authorities, which are responsible for managing family health services in their localities. Fraud is a matter for the police. Information about the number of allegations of fraud made against family practitioners is not available centrally.

Amosite

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence her Department has found to link exposure to untreated amosite with serious illness.

Mr. Sackville: The principal diseases caused by exposure to amosite—brown asbestos—are asbestosis—a fibrosis or scarring of the lung causing difficulty in breathing—lung cancer, and malignant mesothelioma—a cancer of the inner lining of the chest or abdominal wall. Asbestosis was prescribed as an industrial disease in 1933 and mesothelioma in 1966. Since then further diseases have been prescribed such as pneumoconiosis, diffuse mesothelioma, primary carcinoma, or bilateral diffuce pleural thickening through working with asbestos.

The import, supply and use of amosite and crocidolite —blue asbestos—and any product that contains them were banned in the United Kingdom in 1985.

Salaries

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what salaries are payable to chief executives of (a) regional health authorities, (b) district health authorities, (c) district family health services authorities and (d) hospitals currently and in the previous year.

Dr. Mawhinney: Salary ranges for regional general managers, district general managers, family health services authority general managers and general managers of directly managed hospital and community units are shown in the table. In line with increases made to other groups of public sector staff in 1993 an increase of 1·5 per cent. was made to the salary ranges from 1 September 1993. Individual salaries are dependent on a variety of factors including personal performance against locally set targets. The salaries of chief executives of national health service trusts are matters for trust boards. Information on those emoluments is included in annual accounts available locally. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 13 January that from 1 April 1994 each NHS authority and trust will be required to publish an annual report which includes information on the total emoluments of their general manager or chief executive.

Meningitis

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of meningitis there were in each year since 1974; how many deaths there were from meningitis in each year since 1974; and what was the mortality rate from meningitis in each year since 1974.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 17 February 1994]: The information will be placed in the Library.

Contact Lenses

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures her Department has taken following the report by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission to strengthen opticians' guidelines concerning the advice and information to be given to customers about the costs of lens care when customers first opt for contact lenses.

Dr. Mawhinney: Following discussions between the Department of Health and the optical profession, the professional guidelines issued to optometrists by the British College of Optometrists have been strengthened to ensure that the costs of contact lens care regimes are discussed fully with customers before they purchase their contact lenses.

Press and Public Relations Staff

Ms Tessa Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many press and public relations officers were employed by the NHS for each year from 1989 to 1993.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information collected centrally does not separately identify press and public relations staff. At 30 September 1989 and 30 September 1990 some 210 and 240 whole-time equivalent staff respectively were engaged in public relations work in the national health service. Those totals include support staff.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what restriction his Department is planning on the use of national lottery money for revenue funding of organisations.

Mr. Brooke: The section 26(1) directions on which I am today formally consulting the statutory distributing bodies direct them to take into account the need for money to be distributed for capital expenditure and only to be distributed for endowments or revenue grants in order to maintain lottery-funded capital projects where no alternative source of revenue finance is available.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what guidance has been issued to the Sports Council as to how it should distribute moneys from the national lottery.

Mr. Brooke: I have today written to the chairman of the Sports Council formally to consult that body on the content of the directions I propose to issue under section 26(1) of the National Lottery etc. Act 1993. I have written in similar terms to each of the other statutory distributing bodies for which my Department is responsible, and my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland are conducting a similar exercise in their respective countries.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proportion of the total amount of the proceeds from the national lottery is expected to be distributed through the Sports Council.

Mr. Brooke: The proportion of the total national lottery proceeds going to good causes will not be known until the Director General of the National Lottery announces in May the body corporate which is to be awarded the main licence to run the national lottery. Twenty per cent. of the amount for good causes will go to sport, of which 83·3 per cent. will be distributed through the Sports Council to sports projects in England. The remainder will be distributed by the sports councils for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

DEFENCE

Pathogens (Tests)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what tests of live pathogens have taken place outside of the perimeter of Porton Down since 1964; which pathogens were used in each case; how many (i) animals and (ii) humans were exposed to pathogens in each case; and what studies of the persistence of the pathogens used were carried out (a) before and (b) after the tests.

Mr. Hanley: These are matters for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down—CBDE. I have asked the chief executive of CBDE to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Graham Pearson to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 18 February 1994:

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking what tests of live pathogens have taken place outside the perimeter of Porton Down since 1964 has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. Our records indicate that no open air trials or tests involving the use of live pathogens have taken place outside the perimeter of Porton Down since 1964. However, work has been carried out using pathogens in microbiology laboratories, under carefully contained conditions, in compliance with the Health and Safety Executive's requirements at various universities and other institutions throughout the United Kingdom during the course of research funded by the Ministry of Defence.

3. No humans have been involved. Our records do not provide the information sought on the numbers of animals involved in this work carried out over the past 30 years. The pathogens used are handled safely in accordance with national standards and the question of persistence does not apply as facilities are decontaminated thoroughly at the end of the work.

Frigates

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he will announce the result of the competition for the selection of the common new generation frigate United Kingdom platform prime contractor.

(2) when he expects to place the contract for construction of the first common new generation frigate; and what build programme is expected for the follow-on ships of this class.

Mr. Aitken: Following competition, GEC with a consortium of BAe and others have been selected as the UK member for the Franco-British-Italian international joint venture company which will design and build the three first of class ships which are planned to enter service around the turn of the century. The international contract will include important work on the integration of the various weapons systems into the combat system for the ship as a whole and will involve the companies concerned in taking greater responsibilities for a ship of this complexity than has been possible to achieve in the past. The selection of the consortium will enable the combined strengths of GEC Naval Systems, which includes Yarrow Shipbuilders and BAe Defence Systems, supported by Vosper Thornycroft and BAe/SEMA to be brought to bear on this important project and will enable UK industry to play a full part in association with French and Italian industry.

Our current plans are that the joint venture company will be invited to bid against a specification to be issued later this year with the design contract to be placed in 1995. Subject to satisfactory progress the build of the UK first of class ship will commence in three or four years' time. All UK shipyards will have the opportunity to compete for the build of follow-on ships of this class in five or six years' time, when sufficient progress has been achieved on the first of class ship.

Rosyth (Employment)

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will place in the Library the questionnaire on transfer of military employment handed to Rosyth naval base uniformed service personnel.

Mr. Aitken: A copy of the document has been placed in the Library.

Deal Barracks

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the current proposals regarding the Royal Marine barracks at Deal.

Mr. Hanley: The future of the Royal Marines school of music at Deal is under consideration as part of a defence costs study into military music in the armed forces as a whole. The study is due to report to Ministers in March, but it will not be until some time after this that final conclusions will be reached. It is too early to speculate as to the likely outcome of the study.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list all the visits that have been made by Defence Ministers to (a) Ecuador, (b) India, (c) Indonesia, (d) Jordan, (e) Malaysia, (f) Nigeria, (g) Oman, (h) Pakistan and (i) Thailand since June 1987; and what was the purpose of each visit.

Mr. Aitken: Central records of all official visits by Ministers are not kept. Records available show the following visits:

Ministerial visits are generally made to maintain and improve our defence relations with the host country. In each case a broad range of issues was discussed.

Royal Naval Auxiliary Service

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what conclusions have been reached by his Department relating to the Royal Naval Auxiliary Service.

Mr. Hanley: As announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 18 October 1993, Official Report, column 39, there is no continuing defence role for the Royal Naval Auxiliary Service. After a properly managed rundown, the RNXS will disband from 31 March 1994.

RAF Brawdy

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the number of occasions for each year since 1974, together with the total number of occasions that RAF helicopters have been scrambled from RAF Brawdy to assist people in difficulty.

Mr. Hanley: The statistical information requested, available only from 1977, is as follows:

Year	Total number of callouts	Total number of persons assisted
1977	78	43
1978	86	32
1979	79	64
1980	101	111
1981	89	75
1982	126	135

Year	Total number of callouts	Total number of persons assisted

1989	148	132
1990	172	177
1991	162	223
1992	158	86
1993	130	124

Married Quarters

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 484, if he will place in the Library a copy of the independent survey on the married quarters estate that has been carried out; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: I am unable to do so because the report contains information which would be commercially useful to companies tendering to the new housing trust for subcontracting work.

Military Information

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 14 January, Official Report, column 344, what proposals he has considered for assisting the United Nations to enhance its ability to marshall and analyse military information; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Two of the military personnel attached to the United Nations secretariat work in the UN situation centre. As I said in my answer of 14 January, the United Kingdom is ready to consider requests from the UN for assistance in enhancing its ability to marshall and analyse information. To date no such requests have been received.

Trident

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Western Isles (Mr. Macdonald) of 18 January, Official Report, column 505, what consideration underlies the decision not to make public the number of missiles or warheads actually deployed on Trident submarines; what assessment he has made of the effect of such publication on the effectiveness of the system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: A disclosure of the actual deployed capability of our nuclear deterrent might enable a potential adversary to calculate what counter-measures might diminish or negate its effectiveness. For this reason it has been the practice of successive Governments not to make public the number of missiles or warheads actually deployed on our submarines.

TRACER

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what impact the involvement of British troops in United Nations operations has had on the TRACER—tactical reconnaissance armoured combat vehicle—feasibility studies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: The feasibility studies for TRACER currently in progress are based on our latest assessment of the capabilities required for future armoured reconnaissance vehicles. This is derived from the whole range of our operational experience. As is normal, we will be re-examining our requirements against all relevant operational experience before embarking on the next phase of the project.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 8 December, Official Report, column 296, when he expects the TRACER feasibility studies will be completed; and which companies are involved in the three consortia carrying out the studies.

Mr. Aitken: The industrial feasibility studies for TRACER are due to be completed by end of April 1994. The principal companies involved in the three consortia are British Aerospace royal ordnance division, Alvis, GEC-Marconi, GKN Sankey, Vickers Defence Systems, Texas Instruments, Shorts, Siemens-Plessey and Teledyne. There are numerous other United Kingdom and foreign supporting companies which are also involved to varying extents.

Yugoslavia

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to alter the current arrangements for the provision of rations for British service personnel deployed in the former Yugoslavia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Other troop contributors in the former Yugoslavia already use the United Nations system of supply and we have been asked and have agreed to participate in a two-month trial for a small section of our troops in Bosnia. Whether or not we subsequently change our feeding arrangements will depend on the outcome of the trial.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what requests have been made by the United Nations for additional equipment for forces in the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Hanley: The United Kingdom has received a request from the United Nations for mortar-locating radar. As my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence announced yesterday, this request has been approved.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact on service morale of the quality of rations provided to service personnel deployed in the former Yugoslavia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: The quality and quantity of rations provided for United Kingdom personnel in the former Yugoslavia are carefully monitored to ensure consistently high standards. We are fully aware of the importance of a varied and nutritious diet for the morale of our armed forces, and every effort is made to maintain the excellent standard of the rations currently provided.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what rations are currently provided to British service personnel deployed in the former Yugoslavia.

Mr. Hanley: British service personnel in the former Yugoslavia currently receive the same scale of rations, provided from the United Kingdom, as the rest of the British Army.

United Nations Standby Forces

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, column 482, if he will place in the Library a copy of the formal response he intends to make to the United Nations standby forces planning team; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: Consultations between the United Nations standby forces planning team and United Nations member states are being conducted in confidence. It would not therefore be appropriate to place a copy of the United Kingdom's formal response in the Library.

Housing Rents

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 7 December, Official Report, column 173, whether the proposed housing trust will have any influence on the level of rents paid by service personnel.

Mr. Hanley: As stated in my answer of 7 December, we have no plans at present to change the arrangements whereby the accommodation charges payable by service personnel are recommended by the Armed Forces Pay Review Body.

Defence Industrial Base

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 7 December, Official Report, column 177, what elements of the British defence industrial base he regards as a strategic necessity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 15 December, Official Report, column 751.

Royal Ordnance plc

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 February, Official Report, column 517, if he will place in the Library copies of all files that were returned by Royal Ordnance plc to his Department in 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: No. These are public records. Those selected for permanent preservation will be available for examination in due course at the Public Record Office in accordance with the Public Records Acts 1958 and 1967.

Public Interest Immunity Certificates

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which Ministers, and on what occasion and for what reasons, have signed public interest immunity certificates since 1979.

Mr. Hanley: There is no central record providing the information requested.

UNPROFOR

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many major Army units are currently below peacetime establishment, and by how much; and what reinforcement will be made to 2 Battalion the Royal Anglian Regiment for its planned deployment as part of UNPROFOR.

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 14 February 1994]: It is not our practice to disclose the establishment of units in the Army. There are, however, currently seven major arms and services in the Army which have a shortfall of trained manpower against their manpower planning targets. These are shown, together with the percentage to which they are currently manned. If it is deployed, 2 Royal Anglian would be at its full peacetime establishment but in addition some 35 soldiers would be required as reinforcement from elsewhere in the Queen's Division.

Major Army units currently undermanned against manpower planning targets

Arm-Corps	Trained strengths per cent.
Royal Engineers	98·03
Infantry	98·78
Army Air Corps	92·65
Royal Logistic Corps	99·87
Royal Army Chaplains Department	95·00
Royal Army Medical Corps	95·44
QARANC	88·96

Mr. Jack: Publicity campaigns with a budget cost of over £10,000 in the current year are as follows. Plans for 1994-95 are in the process of being finalised, and detailed budgets, are therefore not yet available.

Bovine Immunodeficiency

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many cases of bovine immunodeficiency virus disease have been notified to her Department in the last three years; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what evidence she has that the bovine immunodeficiency virus was introduced into the United Kingdom in infected cattle; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: It is not compulsory to notify cases of bovine immunodeficiency virus to the Department or other authority. A limited investigation in 1990 by the Department's central veterinary laboratory—CVL—suggested there had been a low prevalence of infection in cattle in Great Britain for some time. We have no information on the original source of infection in Great Britian. No cases of disease caused by bovine immunodeficiency virus have been confirmed by the Department in the last three years. It is too early to speculate what role, if any, bovine immunodeficiency virus has played on a particular farm under investigation in Cheshire.

Public Bodies

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when she will answer the questions from the hon. Member for Liverpool, Walton tabled for answer on 28 January regarding appointments to public bodies.

Mr. Jack: All of the hon. Member's questions have now been answered.

SCOTLAND

Limb Defects

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on the incidence of upper limb defects in the Ayrshire and Arran health board area;

(2) what discussions his Department has held with the Ayrshire and Arran health board concerning the incidence of upper limb defects in children within the Ayrshire and Arran health board area;

(3) which agencies in Scotland are charged with monitoring the incidence of limb defects in children born in Scotland;

(4) what contact took place during the investigation of limb defects in the area of the Ayrshire and Arran health board between the board, the General Register Office for Scotland and the Medical Research Council;

(5) how many (a) upper limb and (b) lower limb defects occurred in children born within each health board area in Scotland since 1986.

Mr. Stewart: On the basis of the investigation undertaken by Ayrshire and Arran health board and the discussions which the Scottish Office Home and Health Department has had with that board, I am satisfied that there is no cause for concern in relation to the incidence of upper limb reduction defects in the board's area. Since there was no evidence of clustering and the numbers recorded in Ayrshire and Arran were not significantly different from those in other parts of Scotland, the health board saw no need for contact with the General Register Office for Scotland or the Medical Research Council.

Since 1988, the information and statistics division of the Common Services Agency of the NHS in Scotland has collected and published data on the incidence of congenital anomalies discovered by the end of the first year of life. Data sources include the neonatal discharge record, information from the Scottish stillbirth and neonatal death inquiry, post-neonatal death certificates and admissions to hospital in the first year of life.

The table shows the number of reduction deformities of limbs which occurred in children born in each health board area from 1986 to 1992.

Timex Dispute

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the total costs of policing the Timex dispute situation up to the latest date; and what finance was provided by the Government to Tayside police in relation to these policing costs.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I understand from Tayside police that the total cost of policing the Timex dispute was £332,335. Fifty-one per cent. of the cost will be financed by police specific grant paid by the Secretary of State, and the remainder will qualify for the usual central support for local government expenditure.

Brain Tumours

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many brain tumours have been diagnosed in children aged (a) five years or under, (b) between five and 10 years and (c) aged between 10 and 15 years within each of the health board areas in Scotland during each of the last 10 years;

(2) what research has been undertaken by (a) the Scottish Office and (b) the Ayrshire and Arran health board or the Scottish Office into the incidence of brain tumours or the incidence of cancers within the Ayrshire and Arran, and Dumfries and Galloway health board areas.

Mr. Stewart: The tables show the numbers of malignant tumours of the brain and the central nervous system diagnosed in each of the Scottish health board areas during each of the 10 years from 1983 to 1992 for (a) children aged under five years at diagnosis (b) children aged five to nine years and (c) children aged 10 to 14 years.

The Scottish Office has not undertaken any research on the incidence of brain tumours either in Scotland as a whole or in the Ayrshire and Arran and Dumfries and Galloway health board areas. The cancer registration system provides comprehensive information on the incidence of all types of cancer throughout Scotland, and that information is monitored constantly by the Scottish Office.

The Ayrshire and Arran health board undertook a study on the incidence of brain tumours in 1992. For monitoring of cancer incidence generally, within and outwith its area, it too relies on the cancer registration system.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what expansion there has been in the facilities during the last three years at the Southern General hospital unit national health service trust for treating children with brain tumours and other cancers.

Mr. Stewart: Improvements related specifically to the treatment of children with brain tumours are: replacement and upgrading of magnetic resonance imaging equipment; acquisition of a neurosurgical laser, an ultrasound cavitron and a flexible ventricular endoscope; and upgrading of the paediatric neurosurgery ward. The trust does not treat paediatric cancer patients.

Childhood Cancer

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on the progress of the Scottish case control study of childhood cancer; and whether he can indicate any provisional findings;

(2) what studies are being carried out by the Scottish Office following the recommendations by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment in its report on leukaemia in the Dounreay area; and what is the remit of each of these studies and the areas covered by the studies.

Mr. Stewart: The Scottish case control study is one of two studies currently being carried out following the recommendations of the second report of the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment—COMARE. The study is investigating the role of possible risk factors in the causation of childhood cancers. Information is being collected from the parents of children registered with cancer in the period 1991 to 1995, and from the parents of a comparison group of healthy children. The study, which covers the whole of Scotland, has links with similar studies in England and Wales, thus forming part of the largest epidemiological study of childhood cancer ever undertaken. All the Scottish study information so far obtained is currently being computerised in preparation for analysis. Until that analysis has been completed, it is not possible to indicate even provisional findings.

The other study seeks to confirm all childhood cancers diagnosed in Scotland in the period 1975 to 1990. The validated database will then be used in an analysis of the incidence of childhood cancer in relation to all nuclear sites in Scotland.

Forestry

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the effect any privatisation of the Forestry Commission would have on the Government's stated aim of extending forestry by 3,300 hectares per annum.

Mr. Lang: Ministers have asked the forestry review group to review the options for the ownership and management of Forestry Commission woodlands, and the effectiveness of the current incentives for forestry investment, and to make proposals for changes which would improve the effectiveness of the delivery of the Government's forestry policy objectives, having regard to the Government's other economic and environmental policies.

Privatisation is only one of the many options which the group is considering. My fellow forestry Ministers and I will give careful consideration to the advice which the review group offers, before deciding what action, if any, should be taken.

Dementia

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what response he has made to the report published on 9 February by Scottish Action on Dementia, Alzheimer's Scotland, Dementia Services Development Centre and Age Concern Scotland on long-stay care for people with dementia in Scotland; and what action he intends to take to deal with the concerns raised in the report about the provision of national health service funded long-stay care for frail elderly people and those with dementia.

Mr. Stewart: This report will be studied with interest. The White Paper "Caring for People" made it clear that the Government's policy for the frail elderly with dementia remains that all health boards must secure continuing care for people who need it for reasons of ill-health. Boards must carry out health needs assessments of their resident population and draw up a local health strategy to meet those needs. As purchasers, boards are also encouraged to consider the range of services which may be available for the long-term care needs of their resident populations provided by directly managed units, NHS trusts, or the independent sector.

Sheriff Courts

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding the Sheriff Court Fees Amendment (No. 2) Order 1993; and what was the content of those representations.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A number of representations regarding the Sheriff Court Fees Amendment (No. 2) Order have been received from the Law Society of Scotland and others. These mainly concern the possible effects of the fees on potential litigants. As my noble and learned Friend the Minister of State has made clear, and as I explained in debate on the order in Standing Committee on 9 February, court fees form only a small proportion of the costs of taking a case in the sheriff courts.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how much was spent by (a) Ayrshire and Arran health board, (b) the North Ayrshire and Arran NHS trust, (c) the Community health care trust and (d) the South Ayrshire trust in consultancy fees during the current financial year; and if he will list the companies involved;

(2) how much was spent by (a) Ayrshire and Arran health board, (b) the North Ayrshire and Arran NHS trust (c) the Community health care trust and (d) the South Ayrshire trust in hospitality costs during the current financial year;

(3) if he will list the publications produced by (a) Ayrshire and Arran health board, (b) the North Ayrshire and Arran NHS trust, (c) the Community health care trust and (d) the South Ayrshire trust during the current financial year; and if he will indicate the costs involved in each of these.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 16 February 1994]: This information is not collected centrally. The hon. Member may wish to write to the respective chairmen for the health board and the individual trusts.

Dental Treatment

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people have been deregistered by their dentists in each of the Scottish health board areas during each of the last five years; and how many dentists in each of the Scottish health board areas have been involved in the deregistration.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 16 February 1994]: Formal arrangements for patients to be registered with a specific dentist were introduced under the new contract for general dental services on 1 October 1990. Information about deregistrations since 1 October 1990 supplied by health boards for their area is contained in the table.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what additional revenues he has made available to Scottish health boards to enable them to respond to patients needing emergency NHS dental treatment.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 16 February 1994]: Health boards are responsible for the provision of general dental services including emergency dental services where necessary. Since 1990, general dental practitioners have been responsible for providing emergency dental services for their registered patients. All legitimate costs incurred in providing general dental services are met from central funds.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment the Scottish Office has made of increases in the costs of dental treatment in Scotland as a result of the Government's changes in the payment framework for dentists treating NHS patients.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 16 February 1994]: There have been no recent changes in the system for paying NHS dentists. The Government will publish their response to the Bloomfield report and its proposals for the future in due course.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment the Scottish Office has made of the impact of dentists deregistering their patients on the level of dental health in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 16 February 1994]: The number of patients registered with general dental practitioners has decreased by less than 2 per cent. over the last 18 months from 2,700,874 to 2,650,925. Patients can be deregistered by their dentists for a variety of reasons. It is not possible to relate this information directly to the level of dental health in Scotland.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the Government will respond to the Bloomfield report; and what the Scottish Office's involvement will be in this response.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 16 February 1994]: The Government will publish its response to the Bloomfield report in due course. Scottish Office Ministers and officials have been closely involved in developing the Government's response which will apply equally to the whole of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from Scotland's health boards regarding the Government's response to the Bloomfield report.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 16 February 1994]: The Government will publish their response to the Bloomfield report in due course. No representations have been received from health boards.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 237

SESSION 1993–94

7th February—18th February, 1994

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
